Thread: How big of a hit did the quarantine hit you?

Net - March 30, 2020, 4:27 am

For me personally, I am good so far. Getting worried about my father tho, since he is a workaholic and isn't used to staying at home. Financial wise we are also at a solid place, all of my family members have some kind of savings, so we are good for some time.

What about you? Also what is your advice to go through this easier?

Renestey - March 30, 2020, 4:47 am

I'm good. Done with college the week before lockdown, should have started internship the following week. Now I'm chilling at home getting work done and making some money online

Xtreme™ - March 30, 2020, 4:56 am

We are doing super good here, no complaints.

My father has his own workshop/garage so he is basically bored sitting at home, I used to do the accounting, So I am also free either gaming or watching Netflix.

My Wife is a teacher so work from home is going hard for her, teaching the students online using Zoom and making ppt's all day on her laptop. She is the only one busy :D

Our financial game is also quite strong.

Hoping all this end's fast and everyone can get back to their respective schedules.

Stay Home, Stay Safe!

Cheers!

It's nice to see you guys in good condition both physically and in financial condition :)

So far as for me, I am on a community lock down wherein I have with me my wife and my 2 kiddos...a 5 year old girl and 1 yr old boy.

As of this moment in time we still got some food left maybe for 3 days but I need to go out maybe in the next days because we need to buy milk for both of my children and food stocks.

Financially we've got problem and food stocks wouldn't last for a week because of tight budget. Government haven't send us help yet.

Yea, same. Like I said my dad is a workaholic, I just want for things to go back to normal for his sake.

Looking out my window right now. It's a ghost town.

TehPirate - March 30, 2020, 5:09 am

I just sneezed at work and now in quarantine. My boss "proved" me having a low grade fever using a laser temperature checker on my hand which read 84°F. When I argued that's surface temperature, not body temperature, he then checked his hand which read 95°F and he's wearing gloves that have steamed up so they've reached close to his body temperature. This is where this paranoia has gotten me, quarantined over allergies

Well, my hours have been reduced a lot and I'm working from home now.

It is becoming a little boring being indoors every day if you ask me.

My birthday is also coming up which sucks. I've also had to postpone my wedding which was due in August.

Fortunately I have some other side jobs I can do from my home to keep my income flowing. I feel sorry for those that don't.

Croatia!!!

I think the government did something good with a plan to save us from COVID, but they forget about the economy.

Croatia lives from tourism, we don't have production and we don't have literally anything.

The government closed everything, only supermarket work from 8-17 and everyone who can work from home...

In this country a lot of people live from "month to month" and now a lot of lost their job or they work for minimum wage (it's not enough for a basic living).

I could say we are a safe country. We don't have a lot of police officers patrolling outside, but our mentality.... we just avoid crimes. After this there will be way way more crimes and I'm afraid of it... If COVID doesn't kill us, economy will.

For me personally, not much.

I've been studying economics, reading alot, and I really love this topic. Let's say I was somewhat prepared to see a future decline/crisis back in August 2019 when Fed cut rates for the first time in few years.

I didn't lose my job as we work from home, but even if I did, I have my savings because I don't live a lavish lifestyle and I am calculated when it comes to future.

Sucks that I can't go to gym and make me summer shreds. Dunno how long this will continue but man.. I don't think it's going to end anytime soon. Working out with water gallons rn.

Well I guess if rent is not automatically paid (some countries it is), then 150 is nothing. Renting a room is probably 300+ in whichever country you're in (even in poorest EU countries it is at least 300 eur). 150 basically helps you not going homeless for a while lol

The impact is just inconvenience. Im currently waiting in the car at the supermarket as my girlfriend waits in line to go in. Letting one person in at a time. Takes like 1-2 hours just to get fucking groceries.

People are FREAKING here. Had a lady approach us and freak out because we hopped out the car to talk to my gfs sister.

Staying home hasn't been too bad. Pretty fucking boring.

As far as money goes I'm not stressed. I was just given a $7k grant from government. So that alongside what I have saved is enough to go about 9ish months without work. My girlfriend is able to work from home so it's no stress there.

Going on 10% a day is not bad at all...just continue posting and answering on every post and you will surely get that award :)
