is that a carding method?

ryan1ryan1 - April 1, 2020, 2:16 am
No it does not involve using carding methods [stolen card information, etc]

Is it a legit company line of credit and can it be multiplied (can you setup multiple companies and expand the overall credit available)?

How effective is it in Canada?

Finally, any limits to what you can use that money for (ie. certain loans/lines are earmarked for payroll or otherwise)?

R?R - April 4, 2020, 2:47 am Interested, HM initial investment?

multiple companies with multiple credit lines. E.g. one line per company.

i dont know of the success in canada but there is steps of how to make it work from canada

It is also a legit line of credit the company will be approved for. but if the company doesnt pay it back then the company will owe that debt.

if its credit then generally you purchase whats in line with the company. e.g. I.T company approved for $10,000 then computer equipment would be purchased. Laptops, imacs or macbooks etc. If approved for a loan then withdraw that loan and purchase whatever you like Whats the typical line size achievable?

Mainly interested in if this can be leveraged to acquire cashflow (ie. a niche site from flippa or empireflippers) in which case it's a no brainer.

Physics - April 17, 2020, 12:46 pm

Does my personal credit score matter?

Buk Lau - April 17, 2020, 12:56 pm
