Thread: Ultrade Wide Screens, can't go back

Marxist - April 3, 2020, 3:26 pm

I just bought a curved 2K 34" ultrawide w/G-Sync. It came in yesterday and I've been using it for my second day now.

Dude. I can multitask so seamlessly. Everything is so crisp. I was using a TV before upgrading to this. (Long story. Old one monitor broke) Now I have the monitor and a TV.

Does anyone else use an ultrawide in their set up? Does anyone have more than one? That's something I want to look into. Having two or three for that panoramic look ?

My work laptop makes me feel like I'm gonna get eye cancer now though.

Charizard - April 3, 2020, 3:35 pm

I was going to get an ultrawide but my second monitor is too decent to get rid of just yet. I ended up getting the XG279Q and I think its amazing.

Luca - April 3, 2020, 3:36 pm

I wish I could afford a screen like that. But my current monitor is not too shabby either.

Why not use both? I have an L shape desk now, and having the second monitor to my left is pretty sweet as well. I usually have it open to reference manuals or something.

Pow3r - April 3, 2020, 3:40 pm

I just have two standard, fairly large monitors in my set up. I have had no call for anything fancy however that's a very nice monitor OP.

Lives - April 3, 2020, 6:16 pm

I wish I had the desk space to fit two ultra-wides lol. I currently have two 28" monitors, they do the trick for me. But those ultra-wides are beautiful!

You should post some pictures of your set-up!

Yin Yang - April 3, 2020, 7:21 pm

Yeah the curve monitors are nice.

I'd have to buy a new desk and everything to fit them both on my desk. Can't do that right now.

Which means I also don't have my mouse pad, keyboard, or mouse. So it's very basic right now :p

You can get a decent L shape for under $100. The one I have was only like 94USD

BitcoinLuxury - April 3, 2020, 8:25 pm

I have always wanted to own a curved monitor but I think it would be strange for gaming. Maybe just more uncomfortable until i got used to it, not sure but im sure I will bite the bullet eventually.

No, for some reason I don't personally like ultra-wide monitors!

Being a gamer I use a ROG Swift PG258Q Gaming Monitor – 62.23cm (24.5 viewable) FHD (1920x1080), Native 240Hz, 1ms, G-SYNC™

Stay Home, Stay Safe!
Cheers!

Theocritus - April 4, 2020, 2:18 am

ive never liked ultrawide ones personally, just feels off

Bastille - April 4, 2020, 2:35 am

Planning to get one too, a 49 inch monitor. I was looking at the Samsung C49RG90 (5120 x 1440p) but seems some new will be released soon, and with damn good design

I don't really like ultra wide monitors or curved monitors.

I just have 3. 24" Monitors.

proXace™ - April 4, 2020, 3:08 am

Once you go ultra wide its pretty hard to go back.

I use an UW 35inch for everything on the daily, and game on a 32inch when PC gaming, and a Vertical 24inch for discord etc.

Renestey - April 4, 2020, 3:27 am

Looks really dope, I need to upgrade my monitor soon as since my last one died I've been using a 10+ year old monitor lol.

How much did it cost?

Photograph - April 4, 2020, 3:39 am

Is it 144hz?

Also, how many MS is it?

Let me know I am interested in knowing more about this monitor.
Maybe include model # etc.

Scooby - April 4, 2020, 9:46 am

Am I the only person that kind of misses 4:3? I've acclimated to wide screen, of course. We all had to over a decade ago. But I still find myself getting nostalgic and appreciating when an old fashioned 4:3 tv episode plays on my laptop or TV.

I saw this product recently before buying my 240hz gaming monitor

I think this would be a good buy ROG Swift PG35VQ Ultra-Wide HDR Gaming Monitor – 35" 21:9 Ratio!

200hz 2ms Response time :)

That still looks nice nonetheless!

I see somebody is playing TFT ;) Do you play ranked?

Maybe include model # etc.It has a 4ms response and 120Hz. I'm not a huge monitor guy, and honestly I'm pretty ignorant on the subject but from what I gather this isn't the newest monitor, but it's a decent IPS.

My 2080Ti can handle much more than 120 FPS in most games, but I don't think I'll complain. I've literally been playing in 1920x1080 on a TV at 50Hz :^)

Oh it's an Asus Predator 34p

The guy who worked for me at work had a nearly perfectly square monitor he used as a second monitor and we all roasted him for it. He always said it was nice until I got him a nice IPS widescreen for work :p

Here's an update picture. I got all of my stuff, minus the desk wide mouse pad lol. Excuse the mess.

Thanks for making me hard. Ordered a curved Samsung yesterday, a low budget one. Was in the hunt for a decent monitor for a while, so hyped now for it to arrive!!

Oh man... That PC looks so clean! I'm really digging the set-up! I like the black and red color scheme going on.
