Thread: My PC is Lagging But it was working Fine earlier.

hi_man - April 5, 2020, 12:56 am

Hey,

I have Windows 7 (Original)
i3 Core (2010)
2GB RAM (I downgraded from 3GB to 2GB)

It was working fine with no lagging etc. I used to even play Brawahalla in it. It never encountered any problem.

But I am havgin issues now

Like

- Screen Freeze
- Responds after 5-10 Mins
- When I restart it, It scans some files (Black Screen)

I am not sure but I guess it has downloaded some files or what. I dont have any idea.

I referred to another thread like in which some recommended to run a scan MalwareBytes and AdwCleaner.

I am about to run them and will post the result.

What else do you think could have happend ? How to fix it ?

Thanks

I will also be running CurrPorts to check some Rats or Requests going out from the PC.

Also, For quite some time, It was not connected to Internet and after that I started to see the problems

Its probably overheating, did you try cleaning it or changing the thermal paste?

Are you trolling ? i3, probably 2nd gen, 2 ram and you're playing a game on top of that and you're expecting a normal behavior ?

I used to play. I am serious. It never had this problem since 10 years.

I dont know what has happend to it. Overheating or what.

Now I work on Laptop so i dont use it anymore but need it for some work.

Now, this thing is taking decades in start-up.

It was a matter of time, imo you shouldn't be doing anything in order to get it better. Just upgrade your rig. If you want budget, you can go for ryzen

Considering the CPU is the original and you never changed nothing, you are still running an HDD from 2010 ..?

Good to share the reports, however be aware that there is personal information inside, such as your profil's name directory (C:\Users\name_of_your_profil).

I mainly think about a hardware problem than a software issue. Waiting for the reports.

I think I will buy a new one or will search for a new build.

Just need it for work, nothing much.

I do believe for $800-900 you can build a decent rig. Good luck ?
