

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Who's in a lockdown area? How are the residents handling it?

justarandumbguy - April 6, 2020, 10:22 am

Personally I live somewhere in Florida. People down here don't seem to be concerned about it. Still the same amount of traffic people still in stores. I see a lot more people wearing mask and diapers over their face in an attempt to make a mask. My family in a different state though can't have more than like 50 people in the grocery store. Down where I am stores are still packed with lines.

I'm trying my best to just stay around my house but I like to see all the crazies still out and about. How are the residents around you handling this?

Charlemagne - April 6, 2020, 10:25 am

I'd move out of that shithole state. It's all going to be underwater soon so better get out now.

justarandumbguy - April 6, 2020, 10:26 am

(Apr 6, 2020 10:25 AM)Charlemagne Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'd move out of that shithole state. It's all going to be underwater soon so better get out now.

I love Florida! It's the best state. So warm. So nice.

Disease - April 6, 2020, 10:54 am

(Apr 6, 2020 10:22 AM)justarandumbguy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Personally I live somewhere in Florida. People down here don't seem to be concerned about it. Still the same amount of traffic people still in stores. I see a lot more people wearing mask and diapers over their face in an attempt to make a mask. My family in a different state though can't have more than like 50 people in the grocery store. Down where I am stores are still packed with lines.

I'm trying my best to just stay around my house but I like to see all the crazies still out and about. How are the residents around you handling this?

I'm in New England, and all of the states up here have similar policies in place. Restaurants are closed to dine-in, take out or delivery only. Close-contact businesses like barbers, spas, etc. are closed entirely. And most of the stores are implementing max-capacities to limit the people in the store, and putting markings on the ground at the cash registers that show 6ft of distancing.

Aside from that it's kind of business as usual. I haven't seen any diapers on faces, haha. Masks, both real and utterly ineffective cloth alike, are pretty common. And people wearing the same pair of gloves everywhere they go- which is frustrating. But to each their own.

Renestey - April 6, 2020, 11:13 am

Am in a lockdown area, a bit out of the city though. Everyone here is handling it pretty well and doing work outside around the house now that we have such beautiful days

Rsynced - April 6, 2020, 11:32 am

Florida here also...

Everyone is just chillin like usual, makes you realize how much of a paradise Florida really is when things like this happen.

Everyone is always dirty and sick with something anyways, so it's nothing new.

A couple of years in Florida changes a man. The weather and environment really kicks your ass here on a daily basis!

justarandumbguy - April 6, 2020, 11:34 am

(Apr 6, 2020 10:54 AM)Disease Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm in New England, and all of the states up here have similar policies in place. Restaurants are closed to dine-in, take out or delivery only. Close-contact businesses like barbers, spas, etc. are closed entirely. And most of the stores are implementing max-capacities to limit the people in the store, and putting markings on the ground at the cash registers that show 6ft of distancing.

Aside from that it's kind of business as usual. I haven't seen any diapers on faces, haha. Masks, both real and utterly ineffective cloth alike, are pretty common. And people wearing the same pair of gloves everywhere they go- which is frustrating. But to each their own. Oh yeah.. I live in a bigger city in Florida and it's crazy the things I've seen people have on their faces...

(Apr 6, 2020 11:13 AM)Renestey Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Am in a lockdown area, a bit out of the city though. Everyone here is handling it pretty well and doing work outside around the house now that we have such beautiful days No crime uptick?

(Apr 6, 2020 11:32 AM)Rsynced Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Florida here also...

Everyone is just chillin like usual, makes you realize how much of a paradise Florida really is when things like this happen.

Everyone is always dirty and sick with something anyways, so it's nothing new.

A couple of years in Florida changes a man. The weather and environment really kicks your ass here on a daily basis! Florida is probably the best place to be right now. I'm just pissed they closed the beaches haha. I like that literally no one cares. I went over to the dollar tree this morning to get a pepsi... I was there for 5 minutes. saw a family of like 8 all with diapers wrapped around their face. no gloves. but they had diapers... LOL w/e most people where I'm at are still congregating and gas stations still poppin...

Werd - April 6, 2020, 11:56 am

Yeah, I am personally only going to and from work really. The people keep calling work and like begging us to come in the store and when we tell them no they get very upset.

It's wild to watch people sneak around just to hang with friends. Local PD has to chase 30 teenagers away from one of the schools in the area because they were just out playing basketball.

justarandumbguy - April 6, 2020, 12:01 pm

(Apr 6, 2020 11:56 AM)Werd Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah, I am personally only going to and from work really. The people keep calling work and like begging us to come in the store and when we tell them no they get very upset.

It's wild to watch people sneak around just to hang with friends. Local PD has to chase 30 teenagers away from one of the schools in the area because they were just out playing basketball.

To funny! People still playing basketball at parks... People still going to dog parks. Life continues around here LOL scam. - April 6, 2020, 2:13 pm

Most people where I'm at are taking it serious. $1000 fine and up to 6 months in jail for breaking it so they should be lol.

Still a surprising amount of cars on the road though. Not sure what they're all doing considering everything is closed.

Simplex - April 6, 2020, 2:15 pm

I'm in a lockdown area. (wont say which one due to privacy concerns)

Haven't been able to get to the gym in awhile hate this. Hoping for two more weeks. Made more money from unemployment then I did working Imfao.

Scooby - April 6, 2020, 2:43 pm

We currently have stay at home orders, not a full lockdown. That said, nobody is staying at home like they should. Well, some are obviously, but not nearly as many as should be.

Yin Yang - April 6, 2020, 4:32 pm

I'm in NYC and it's pretty crazy over here.

justarandumbguy - April 6, 2020, 6:09 pm

I feel bad for all you extroverts who can't go out and do shit.

Cameron - April 6, 2020, 6:13 pm

(Apr 6, 2020 04:32 PM)Yin Yang Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm in NYC and it's pretty crazy over here.

Been hearing about NY basically every day here in Australia. Sounds pretty horrifying there right now.

Yin Yang - April 6, 2020, 6:15 pm

(Apr 6, 2020 06:13 PM)Cameron Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Been hearing about NY basically every day here in Australia. Sounds pretty horrifying there right now.Yeah, NY wasn't prepared at all for it. A lot of the hospitals are overfilled. Luckily, I get to work remote and just been quarantined.

Cameron - April 6, 2020, 6:16 pm

(Apr 6, 2020 06:15 PM)Yin Yang Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah, NY wasn't prepared at all for it. A lot of the hospitals are overfilled. Luckily, I get to work remote and just been quarantined.

Very lucky man. Not sure if legit or not but I've seen videos of forklifts just loading trucks with bodies and whatnot.

Scooby - April 6, 2020, 6:18 pm

(Apr 6, 2020 06:15 PM)Yin Yang Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah, NY wasn't prepared at all for it. A lot of the hospitals are overfilled. Luckily, I get to work remote and just been quarantined.

Meanwhile, in my location, they are closing an Urgent Care and laying off some healthcare workers due to them being considered "elective". Then you've got Elon Musk buying all those fucking ventilators only for them to turn out to be devices for sleep apnea. Like, when will the madness end?!?! lol

Swagman223 - April 6, 2020, 6:19 pm

People are going crazy where I am in NYC... Shits crazy duke007 - April 6, 2020, 8:00 pm

it sucks, but it'd be extremely ignorant not to be in lockdown

SaintJimmy - April 6, 2020, 10:02 pm

Lockdown in my locality is quite in discipline. People are doing everything they can. They have food and necessities stocked up. Contactless delivery is good as it gets here. People are not going outside at all. I wish I could say the same about the rest of city though. It's lazy downtown. Sun came out last week and people flocked at the people? Smart move huh? It's the same people who are falling out like flies now. There's army and military vehicles barricaded everywhere to restrict movements. There are people and deadbodies on the streets and soldiers carrying them to morgue. These are the people who have had no regard for lockdown.