Do Not Flush Flushable Wipes or Paper Towels.

Xtreme™ - April 14, 2020, 3:26 am

Who does that?

Don't people have like a BIN in their toilets lol!

Thes Wipes and Towels do not break down as easily and can cause blockage issues in the sewer systems!

USE THE BIN!

Stay Home, Stay Safe!

bevc - April 14, 2020, 3:27 am

Don't flush flushable wipes? Then why are they called flushable wipes?

flavoral - April 14, 2020, 3:28 am

Some countries have strong/good drainage system that they handle people flushing TPs

shitmaster - April 14, 2020, 3:32 am

I do it every once in a while. Really depends on the wipes and the flush system that is used. The tissues I use here tear easily when in contact with water. Even shit takes more time degrading.

Be safe buddy ?

bevc - April 14, 2020, 3:36 am

Have you ever been to Athens? Possibly the greatest city in the world, yet is ruined by the fact that you can't flush toilet paper. The sewer system pipes can't handle it.

I have seen a lot of people in public toilets/Restrooms do that and not even flush lol

Theocritus - April 14, 2020, 4:14 am in many European countries, the system is made for the toilet paper to be flushed

Sh4ggy - April 14, 2020, 4:18 am

Septic safe wipes should be fine to flush. Couldn't imagine seeing a bin full of either bloody or fecal stained wipes in a waste bin. ?

Macbook - April 14, 2020, 4:22 am

I have been flushing TP all of my life. Not a single blockage. Can someone explain why you would throw dirty TP in a bin instead of flushing it down?

Ash Ketchum - April 14, 2020, 4:34 am

don't tell me how to live my fucking life.. i'll flush whatever i want

Cyam - April 14, 2020, 4:50 am

Thank you for the notice though.

Makes sense.

humanbody - April 14, 2020, 5:06 am

I never put a toilet paper in a bin in my entire life. I always flush it.

Yin Yang - April 14, 2020, 7:50 am

Thanks for the heads up homie

Pow3r - April 14, 2020, 8:11 am

Ironically "flushable" wipes aren't generally flushable. However paper and such is easily handled by sewer systems in My country. Wiping your ass and then binning it? Nah homie. I'm good.

?ystem - April 14, 2020, 9:05 am

I thought this was pretty much common sense? I certainly don't trust flushing those for any reason, and it's a pain in the ass to unclog the toilet when some anonymous numbnuts in the house decides to do this.

V?rt - April 14, 2020, 11:59 am

Okay, I'll never use paper towels in the first place, but why not flush "flushable wipes" I do it, and have never had a sewage problem. I'm just saying, if someone throws some crap in my trash can, I'm throwing hands.

The flushable ones generally aren't, even though they are marketed as such. They cause issues in the sewer system rather than at your property as such. I agree on the shit in the bin though. Do that at my house and it's on.

So it's okay if some killer on a TV show chops a huge ass person into pieces and flushes him down the drain but when we talk about "flushable wipes" they block the drain?

What kind of sorcery is this?

Simplex - April 14, 2020, 2:25 pm

Or you could invest in a bidet and join the elite like I did Organic material breaks down. Non organic doesn't. At least not as quickly or efficiently. Not that I've cut anyone up. Obviously.

I worked at a place that had illegal Mexicans and they would just throw their shitty TP in the trash. IT WAS FUCKING DISGUSTING.

Don't fucking do that if you live in the US. This isn't some third world SHITHOLE.

Lots of places have very poor sewerage systems and that is kind of understandable but you're right that shizzle is just plain nasty.

I am a vegetarian no ham allowed in the house. But I wonder if I could train my pet to lick my ass clean after I am done with my business. Thanks for the idea mate, I will keep you posted on how the training goes!

I hope you meant cleaning your own because if you're going around holding people at gunpoint until they let you clean their ass with your hand would be something disturbing.

Unless you're from Florida. Everything is normal in Florida.

Ash Ketchum - April 15, 2020, 1:24 am

it baffles me at how the fk this is still an active discussion lol.

CyberStrike - April 15, 2020, 2:21 am

That's pretty spot on, flushable wipes will cause a clog with these low flush toilets it's brutal. Heck if you take big poops that might be the end of the toilet forget even toilet paper included in that mess. I will say this that the tankless toilets mainly in commercial buildings tend to be pretty skookum (strong/tough) those guys can eat pretty close to everything, I say close because I've defeated a couple, it's pretty bad when you flush toilet paper and water go down but the poop is still stuck in the toilet.

Ash Ketchum - April 15, 2020, 2:25 am

what kind of shit sewage systems do you guys have that wet wipes will fk your shit up lmao?
