Thread: weird issue with my pc did it happen to you b4?

sonny - April 20, 2020, 2:56 am so i have been using my pc from the day that i bought it i guess 3 years ago and before 1 week my keyboard wasn't working correctly and i had to buy a new one it was typing 2 characters and stuff like when i press "d" i get like "ds" i tried to clean the dust but it didn't work after i bought my new keyboard it worked fine for 11 days so far but today i found out that my mouse scroll wheel is not working for example if i tried to scroll right now nothing will happen but after 20-30 min it scrolls randomly and it press's tab in my keyboard. just a little note i kinda like got hacked since when my other broken keyboard started typing weird shit i got emails that someone tried to access them so i did a full reset and format for my pc so now i am really not sure is it my pc or am i still hacked i did run malawarebytes & kaspersky & avast to check for both software viruses and hardware and both them said that my pc is clean so what it could be? i really need your help guys!

You could be, reformatting your pc is good. You can also try not using that computer for a few days (no internet access).

It's always good to reinstall Windows to be 100% sure.

I had something kind of similar few years ago. Some keys wouldn't do what they were supposed to do, ... Checked for viruses, found one, and every bug was gone. Maybe you have something similar, but much more hidden you mean completely leaving it or testing it offline?

Is the problem still present after reformatting and downgrading?

Formatting and changing all your passwords should be good enough. Even tho just to be safe you should also check that what ever you had on your computer hasn't spread to any external media like flash drives n what nat ;)

Have you opened up the pc and just checked if the motherboard is seated correctly, nothing loose etc?

Yanix - April 20, 2020, 3:29 am

Avoiding porn sites and downloading from uncertain and unreliable sites can prevent you from virus.

yeah true but i never opened any could it be possibly that my hard drive that was connected to my old pc infected me again? since i plugged that to get some files that i kept for backup?

You've tried everything I could think of, it could be a dodgy USB bus on your motherboard. Have you tried multiple ports? re-seating any internal USB headers? If you've reformatted and tried clean version of Windows then it's most likely your computer itself.

Something might be loose, or.....anything. It's worth taking a look under the hood just to see if anything is awry.

You could run Wireshark and do some different analysis. Maybe ask somebody here for help about a questionable file but tbh man, I would reformat that bad boy.

Simplex - April 20, 2020, 4:11 am

That is weird, never happened to me. Try asking in the White Hat Malware, Virus, and Rat Removal Help. Those smarties might know what's going on.

sonny - April 20, 2020, 10:17 am

I formatted my pc and it still didn't work I tried it on my brothers laptop and the my mouse still didn't work do you guys think that maybe I should change my motherboard? Since most hardware viruses target motherboards?

(Apr 20, 2020 07:59 AM)phantomman55 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I think you're still hacked and maybe a rat is in your computer.

So I guess rip my whole pc?

shitmaster - April 21, 2020, 2:25 pm

I used to get this issue whenever I used the KeyScrambler software. So it may be something either encrypting or logging your keyboard hooks. If its a software to keep you safe; you are good. But since I don't think you use any similar software's to KeyScrambler; it may be a malware or hardware defect.
