Thread: Impersonator Using Skype Username 'pulseservers'

Tekkie - April 25, 2020, 10:45 am

I do not communicate with anyone via Skype. I do not do any deals on HF without a contract in place and communication first via HF. It's even in my signature.

The Skype account 'pulseservers' is not me, nor any member of my staff. I certainly don't write like a 12-year-old that's still learning English.

Don't fall for the scams these idiots are trying. Always use contracts and if it's not someone you've exchanged with a few times before, communicate via HF to confirm the deal.

thanks for this , after being scammed for 750 USD from user @checkMyNuts, i was going to exchange for 500 PP by him .
but your thread saved me now .

thanks brother , big hug and blessings from my family .

Fantastic. Glad to hear I saved a $500 loss.

ALWAYS ALWAYS ALWAYS exchange using contracts on HF and communicate using HF convo/PM to confirm you're talking to them on the right account outside of HF if you communicate outside of HF.

If you ever want to exchange, go to a trusted exchanger like Lavish Living and not some random low-marketplace rep user.

What an unnecessary and rude dig. I'm exceptionally trustworthy and have handled loads of exchanges during my many years in this community... Anyone can impersonate someone else, including the member you've linked. The reason I'm being impersonated is because of my exceptional exchanging history and trustworthiness. I think you've totally misunderstood how this all works.

Homie I didn't even know you were an exchanger, I don't know who you are and all I got from this post is that you offer hosting services. He said he was scammed by a random user so I said don't exchange large amounts with a random user and tagged someone who I recently did a large exchange with in attempts to help him. The fact that you took that as a personal attack is rather silly..

I have impersonators because I am a regular exchanger of AGC and BTC, including a stickied thread that's getting a lot of attention. The point of the thread is that I'm bringing attention to there being impersonators, who pretend to be people like both me and the person you've mentioned in order to trick people into exchanging with them. There's no less risk by exchanging with someone else instead of me. The risk comes from not using contracts and HF communication to verify the person you're talking to off-site is in fact the person you think you're exchanging with.

Have a better day.

Did you just openly promote lavish who refused to close buy-ins to a crew he's selling, i'd hardly see him as trusted.

No offence @tekkie is one of the finest Exchanger here it was my bad luck I fall into scam , I wish I would have waited for tekkie and should have contacted him for the deal , but I believe kasper intention was to let me know one good exchanger which he knows better , as he suggested me . so I do not get scammed again .

please dont fight hehe .

I don't know every HF member's hustle & friends & dislikes & experiences & past posts. I don't memorize every HF post and keep up with all the group drama because I don't care about groups. From my own personal experience, I've done a large deal with him and it was successful and easy, so I recommended him. I don't know about, nor care, about HF group drama and what members you have beef with.

What he did might be shitty, but is in no way related to currency exchanges, so why bring it up?
