If you are a Walt Disney World lover such as myself, (Annual Pass holder) and want to watch the firework stream I'll drop the link below.

It was quite a spectacular show.

Agreed, WDW is definitely one of my favorite places to be and you can never grow tired of it. It also helps that Universal is right next door (I am the biggest harry potter geek there is)

They spend upwards of 50 million every year on fireworks alone.

shitmaster - April 26, 2020, 5:22 pm

Woah. That's a beauty. Watched all 14 mins+ of the video. I used to like Disney as a kid. But never had the chance to be to any Disneyland's. I will need to make a trip to a country that has a Disneyland! The closest thing I have been to is Universal Studios in Singapore.

Annual Pass Holder means that you have free admission to any Disney oriented Park for free. You need to renew it annually.

Suspicious of what exactly?

My brother lives in Orlando and his girlfriend is a Disney cast member. I have been going to Disney every year since I was a mere child.

The fact that people automatically associate Disney and children is closed minded. They have Clubs, Bars, and shows that are 21 and up. I find your deductive reasoning to be unfounded. Epcot's world show case has 11 different countries with different Beers and specialty Drinks from different countries. People even made a game called drinking around the showcase where you go around to every country and get drunk. Not to mention, you need to be from set country to work in the country in the showcase.

I think they made a modified version of the last firework show before closing and added it with other aspects virtually. I could be wrong though. I have no true idea.

Edit:

Was part of the Disney magic moments.

Yes it was pre recorded.

Free admission to parks for the year.

Basically if you go to the parks at least 7 times in a year it pays for itself. Also gives you admission to any Disney park.

It normally costs 115 per day and most people spend 5 to 7 days for a vacation. I am part of the vacation club (basically Disney's form of timeshare) where you get a set amount of points to spend traveling to any disney hotel, or partnership throughout the world. It can be spent on cruises or international hotels, wherever disney is affiliated with. The vacation club essentially means I can stay on property for free by spending my allocated points I earn each year. I think my vacation club membership expires in 2050 and we bought in in early 2000s.

If you bothered to look it up you would see it was mainly targeting millenials who were fans of disney as a kid.

So what are adults doing at Disney World? The luxury hotels and dining usually top the list. And the classic attractions, fireworks and parades are still a draw for grownups.

Clearly you do because you love making references to kids when I clearly have proven that disney is not just a child environment. You have proven yet again to be a closed narrow minded pseudo intellectual that has no knowledge on what they are talking about. You have preconceived notions in your head about something in which you are simply and factually incorrect.

I'm just trying to get you to stop projecting by letting you know that it's obvious what you're doing at Disney land, no matter how you twist it or how much you try and justify yourself it only becomes clearer with each response.

YOU brought up children not me. YOU keep on dragging out a forum debate with the same reference to CHILDREN. You are an insignificant fool who spends his time trying to troll and waste other people's time. Lucky for you I can go at this all day long. Be prepared to sit on your computer with your greasy fat fingers typing away like tEh BiG bOsS tHaT u ArE there you go again.. projecting and my god for someone who tried to insult others for their relevance on a forum you sure seem to care a fair bit about your image, i bet you haven't sat up all night for someone since Halloween you sicko.

You are very intelligent sir.

Thanks for finally admitting some truth, now just for you to open up about the main reason we're here.

Sorry, I just read this,

I had to deal with people trying to rile me up for no reason other than their own personal satisfaction.

You could they were infatuated by me or something. Kind of weird.

Anyways, they have fast passes for the majority of rides now.

I can get by with 10-15 minutes whenever I fast pass something.

I mainly go for the food though.

Disney is known for having exceptionally good food and drinks.
