Thread: BTC Crosses \$8000 \(April 29, 2020\)

Decim - April 29, 2020, 3:28 am

So, Bitcoin has crossed the $8000 mark today.

Thoughts?

Eco Luko - April 29, 2020, 3:29 am

That's flying up, I got a notification about half an hour ago that it was going up and that was at 7.9k edit: just bought $500 BTC, will update this post later with my profits if any edit2: up $10 atm lol, will update properly later

Mr Kewl - April 29, 2020, 3:30 am

We're going all the way up.

Sam Baikey - April 29, 2020, 3:32 am

ETH broke past $200 mark and btc broke past 8k mark, moon all the way baby.

Oh yeah, that's good news made my day little bit better:

Ethereum isn't an alt coin bud.

SaintJimmy - April 29, 2020, 3:57 am

This is good. I made a few stock when the price was at $7200. Might just go and check how much I have made. Might sell off a couple of bucks as well. $9000 doesn't seem far now.

BubbleKush - April 29, 2020, 4:20 am

Nothing surprising, I expected that and stacked myself really hard :)

SIM-1169085 - April 29, 2020, 4:35 am

Good morning Bitcoin

The gains are real real nice right now I tell ya.

BITCOIN TO THE MOON!

Plista - April 29, 2020, 5:30 am

Omni tipped it $7800... glad to see we've surpassed this one. Looking forward to the next tip ;)

01001 - April 29, 2020, 5:47 am

We can expect $9000+ by June; however, halving might affect it for a while.

Very glad to see btc going up. However doesn't btc usually tend to drop back down after a big increase?

th3c0rrupt3d0n3 - April 29, 2020, 7:44 am

Is incredible to think Bitcoin got rekt on March 12th down to 4000 and now we are 2x from it. What a time to be alive.

illuminare - April 29, 2020, 8:24 am

What do you guys recon its going to hit this winter?

Thor Odinson - April 29, 2020, 9:20 am

Few questions:

1. anyone think its going to do a significant dip soon and then rebound? I took my money out right before this... Didnt think itd actually do it.

2. Any high risk, high reward alt coins you guys are looking at on Binance.com? I'm down to just risk it

Honestly I thought it was going to dip to 7,500 but it looks like it's gonna be a steady 8k more than likely if any dip

I mean no one really knows if there will be a dip but I think we're over do for one, eth jumped from 150->170->210 which I think is fair to say is overstretched, it'll dip to 180/190 for a little then re-up unless COVID wave 2 makes an appearance then we'll see 150 again

Plista - April 29, 2020, 9:42 am

Just broke $8500!

I wonder if it'll hold

Zee - April 29, 2020, 9:52 am

It is rising way too fast, it will crash down at some point, this is not healthy growth. Also, BTC should only be viewed as an alternative for asset holding, as the fee's that comes with the high price fluctuations won't make it a proper solution for daily use, at least that's what I can tell from the current network fee's.

Short-term profit margins are still looking good, but long-term this won't be good. A slow but steady growth is much more optimal, rather than having 10% 20% 30% jumps in a day.

btc is under where it was suppose to be if the corona false flag event never occurred , and we are headed to knock down 14k (1-2 weeks) after it halves it might dip a bit then it's all up hill from there I've seen this happen over and over through out the years. 25K will be price by next year and 1k for eth (around this time of year) ;)

Essentially for BTC to hit those big numbers it needs to be more optimal in terms of processing day-to-day payments. Network fee's ranging from $1-2 will not make this do-able, even if the price rises. However, I agree that the current price of BTC probably reflects a more accurate value in terms of asset holding. Hopefully an AltCoin will solve these problems/if not already solved, and hopefully by then that AltCoin will receive the spotlight by the public.

What would you say is your ideal growth pattern? Or growth rates?

(Apr 29, 2020 12:38 PM)MrJamesDean Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What would you say is your ideal growth pattern? Or growth rates?

A realistic steady growth rate would be anywhere from 0.50 to 5% a month, as it would show that BTC isn't as volatile to price fluctuations, and the price would then be a reflection of the adaptation towards the technology behind it, and not just for the quick profit margins. I'm in Crypto for long term, and hopefully another coin will receive the spotlight for day-to-day use and mass adaptation, whilst BTC will hold its value due to the history of the asset. Sort of like a collectable.

You are way off. We can expect $10k+ by June possibly even $12k.

Quote:1. anyone think its going to do a significant dip soon and then rebound? I took my money out right before this... Didnt think itd actually do it.

Without Covid-19 there would not have been any dip. So unless some new drastic world economy situation occurs I don't think any significant dip is coming.

WRONG! It's going the other way. Maybe to $400+ in 2020.

I pay a lot less on average. Usually paying 10 cents or less. You pay more if you're not using Segwit, a crap exchange, wallet without good calculating (Exodus for example) or just want super fast confirmation.

I will still be holding regardless of what happens to the prices. However, I am currently experiencing $2 network fee's for decent transaction speeds, this probably has something to do with the application I am using as you mentioned, however one of the issues BTC was meant to solve was basically faster transactions. The companies distributing the tech behind it should also adopt to these changes, as it would pay off for both sides. Imagine the problem it would cause if BTC rises to $25k and people share the same issue I mentioned with my current network fee's. Segwit fee's are currently at $1.03 to confirm 6 blocks @60min. I might be looking at an outdated calculator, but what would you recommend for low fees & fast transaction speeds?

Sam Baikey - April 29, 2020, 1:47 pm

FOMO is gonna hit hard tomorrow, I see a bunch of newcomers asking if they should buy now using cash app on reddit.

people transfer millions and pay .30 cent fee's lol don't see what your trying to get at. BCH is only fork I'd trust in , ETH is nice aswell.

Yes usually at heavy txn times fees go up but who can complain when the value is up 10% on the day? I will agree that it is disruptive for payments.

Quote: Imagine the problem it would cause if BTC rises to $25k and people share the same issue I mentioned with my current network fee's.

Bitcoin will NOT be the day-to-day crypto. It does not need that transaction volume and will never make it. Lightning does fix it btw but I am not a fan so far.

Also I been using this site for fee calculations.

<https://bitcoinfees.net/> Thank you for the recommended site, also I don't look at the short-term gains but in order to make Crypto succeed then it requires mass adoption, and that will most likely only be achievable by showing the developments within Bitcoin, as it is already a familiar name due to the mass medias in 2015.

BTC has dropped down to $8700 US so It may be correcting. Personally I'd wait and it may drop a little then keep going up. With the growth been so sudden it has a high likelihood of taking a few steps down to then carry on rising.
