Thread: How to avoid Paypal charge backs ?

BubbleKush - April 29, 2020, 4:48 am

Is there a way to avoid Paypal charge backs ? I got a lot of BTC sitting around and I want to start doing CE but I really don't want to send people the BTC and them to charge back me after that. Is there a real working method which works 100%. I am also willing to pay for the information if it comes from a trusted source

No and they are against currency exchange so if they find out that's what you are doing you will be closed

Best thing to do is just to exchange with trusted users only but even then you will also have some chargebacks, it's apart of the game.

But I am afraid that everyone can decide to fuck you up at some point. So I am still debating what to do

That's the risk you have to take, ask any CE exchanger.

tell them to send it as f&f but even then you are not safe. How much you got i would be interested in a exchange.

I can get over 20 BTC to exchange but I don't think I will do it if it's that risky

20 dollars or 20 BTC

Dorrance - April 29, 2020, 4:58 am

Simply not use PayPal for anything.

20 BTC mate

Malthemar - April 29, 2020, 4:59 am

I never use PayPal anymore. PayPal want your money just as much as the people that charge it back.
