Thread: Plants for my room

funtela - April 30, 2020, 7:06 am

I've been thinking of getting a small/medium sized plant for my room. Something I can water a few times a week that doesn't require much work, while giving some more life to my room.

I have no experience whatsoever as to what plant(s) would be ideal. Anything you guys recommend?

Cactus, it will be easy to take care of Bamboo is also a really nice option.

Aloe and Peace lily or whatever it is called. Really easy to maintain and they look good.

How's the scent? I doubt it but it would be cool if it gave a nice strong plant smell to my room.

My mom has a Aloe and it doesn't smell afaik. But i don't live at home, so i can't check right now.

Honestly, the best thing would be to ask a plant shop worker for their opinion. Well, atleast when the rona thing is over.

Aloe is definitely nice to have around the house for burns, pretty easy to grow to. Always had it around when I was growing up used it more times than I would like to admit

SaintJimmy - April 30, 2020, 8:13 am

You could get the smaller bamboo plants. Those don't grow much. There are some nice smelling aloe plants which I would recommend and exotic cactus, only if you want.

I've placed 2 small sansevierias.
I water them once every 2 weeks and they clean the air as well.

Silkroad - April 30, 2020, 8:29 am

I got a cactus, it was like 1 inch when I got it and now it's like 6 inches lol

It's the only plant that my cat won't fuck with, love it.

You should totally get some bonsai trees/plants! They're absolutely beautiful and don't require all that much maintenance from what I've heard about them.

They're literally so nice.

You should go on Google and see if any shops in your area sell them. There's one in mine that I never would've known about just by driving by it, I was shown it by someone else. Knowing where you're at though you most likely have a million and one places to choose from when it comes to bonsai trees/plants.

There's a few places in my area but closed ?

I could buy it online but I'd prefer to personally look at it beforehand.

Damn, that sucks but unfortunately it's not surprising either. :/

And yeah I'm with you there, I'd much rather see and feel what I'm buying seeing these can be pricey depending on what type and what size you plan to get.

Oh I don't personally own one actually, I wish I did though lol.

Maybe after this is all over and the store is back open I'll get myself one.
I've always wanted a small pink leaf bonsai tree, not sure what they're actually called.

All replies above are very good and easy to take care of.

My wife and I have what they call a "money tree" in our house.
Very easy and beautiful. They can grow some what large.

Get a bansai tree. They don't require much maintenance and look really cool. Unless you want something that smells. Also adding a small fountain or something to your room will bring it together.

Damn now I want a fountain to accompany it haha. I'll look up a few on Amazon. Do you have one?

Almonds - April 30, 2020, 10:09 am

Get yourself an ivy, and a few succulents.

Theocritus - April 30, 2020, 10:10 am get an aloe vera plant. great cute little suckers that don't need watering super often and you can break off shoots of it and apply to wounds and such as well when needed

Nah I had one as a kid and a lava lamp that I loved. My room in my apartment now has a string of blacklight christmas lights strung up around it. The purple light helps me sleep for some reason.

This one is nice.

I know what you mean about the purple light. I have two smartbulbs that I change to a purple/pink/red theme once it hits 9pm. It really helps get me relaxed and tired.

That was just the cheapest one I could find lol I'd buy it if I knew my dog wouldn't knock it over.

A + - April 30, 2020, 10:25 am

Not too sure what kind of plant exactly, but I'll bet if you got some of those wall plants (it's just a pot that fits to the wall), a couple of those would be pretty cool.

If you're thinking of something a little more fresh and modern, I'd go for a bamboo or cactus plant. If you're thinking of something more laid back that also helps with burns, definitely an aloe plant. I've had a cactus, aloe plant, and bamboo all throughout my life, and I love aloe plant's because they're easy to grow and take care of and they really do help with burns and soothing. Bamboo is great because its simple and small (depending on how large you're thinking), and a cactus (again size matters) is nice and unique and pleasing to look at.

A bamboo would look awesome in the corner of my room. Something around 5-6ft if they come in those sizes. Or grow to only those sizes.

MrJamesDean - April 30, 2020, 11:09 am

Definitely get some cacti. I would also recommend bonsai trees, I find them really pleasing to look at and the maintenance isn't that hard if you read into it and get a good routine. You could also look into aloe vera plants, they're good to have around.

humanbody - April 30, 2020, 11:12 am

Get a cactus dude. That thing can survive for like a month if you water it only once. That's what it takes. I had cactus too bad it's not for a lazy people like me. I had to water it only once per month and I forgot to do it then it went bad lol.

If you are lazy like me get a cactus. Besides the water you don't need to care about anything else. It's also a good weapon if you catch your EX cheating on you, you can just throw at her and say goodbye to her.

Bob White - April 30, 2020, 11:47 am

Cactus are great, if you have cats they will eat most other plants, my wife had to give away all her huge tree type plants because the cat kept eating them and barfing them up everywhere.

Redecorating your room adding some new stuff does lift the vibe or energy. Start with the little things and work its way to more motivating you bud.

yep cactus can be beautiful and low maintenance.

but just go to a shop and look for what you find nice, watering something once a day at most isn't a lot of work.

I don't mind watering them at all. I just know some require a certain amount/type of light. Trying to avoid that extra work.
