Thread: Elon just gave everyone a chance to invest.

a11s - May 1, 2020, 5:10 pm

Basically, Elon tweeted this:

and this happened:

This guy is a fucking genius.

What I think his plan is? Dip the prices and invest even more in his company.

The prices will go back to normal in no time, and a 10% profit is almost guaranteed in my opinion.

I just thought I'd give you a little bit of help.

omy11 - May 1, 2020, 5:29 pm

I have already set some money aside to invest in this as soon as it goes up a little. I love Elon.

Velma - May 1, 2020, 5:31 pm

Elon is a one of a kind he is a walking legend.

Grim - May 1, 2020, 5:37 pm

Can't you go to jail for that lol

? Soufian ? - May 1, 2020, 5:38 pm

Didn't he get in trouble for such tweet earlier? For rumours about Tesla regarding something... which caused Tesla to skyrocket?

Bob White - May 1, 2020, 5:40 pm

That sucks for me, I've been invested in Tesla for a while now, all that does is devalue the shares I already own.

He just wants more money because nobody is out buying Tesla cars right now during all this corona shit.

What a cock gobbler.

Hah, that's amazing.

I don't know how I end up without any savings every time there is an opportunity to invest in.

I've been watching every opportunity constantly, from $4K BTC to this now with $300 in my wallet.

My bad luck is incredible, hah.

Just hold the ones you already have and buy more now when it is down.

You haven't lost any money yet if you don't sell.

Tesla stock has been steadily declining over the last month, I've already lost a few grand in it, and now this lol.

Just saying, he needs to keep the evaluation of his stock relative to its actual worth.

Considering taking Tesla private at stock price of $420, making shitload of people invest into it.
So he got lawsuits from shareholders

That seems to be a lot different.

He went from "It is possible that I'll make this happen" to "My opinion is".

He is not implying that he is going to do something, he just gave his opinion.

I think he learned from the past.

My semi-uneducated opinion is to keep holding, which you're most likely doing anyway.

If it helps, maybe boost your morale a bit, I strongly believe Tesla's stocks will go back as soon as this pandemic is over.

Smart move to say "Imo" but I still think it's a risky move for such tweet that immediately affects the price.

I'm still curious what his plan is. No CEO would randomly think about "Hmmm... let's decrease the value of my company"

Yeah, I'm not a lawyer nor am I studying the law, but my simple logic is that the "imo" are the saving words here.

He's probably decreasing the value in order to invest more into it, but that's an opinion formed after just 8 hours from the tweet, more may be revealed later.

I love Elon. He does stuff like this ALL the time, it's so dope.

When I saw this I also wondered if it was legal like the ones above, but I'm sure Elon's learned from his mistakes and checked with lawyers or something before tweeting this lol

Yup, Elon is one of the best humans we have today. Swear this guy was born on the wrong planet.

I discussed above with a guy about the legal part, I think that's the saving trick. ("Imo" instead of actually saying you're gonna do something)

Crazy how a single tweet had such an effect.

Why would you invest after it starts to go back up? You should buy when it bottoms to maximize profits imo

MavenGradle - May 4, 2020, 5:34 am

Have you seen his latest tweets?

<https://twitter.com/elonmusk/status/1256856981177987072>

He's into Minecraft now. I'm not sure what to think of that, but I was there when he tweeted it, saw it live and quite frankly I think that the corona madness has made another victim. Corona madness is going to be a very real thing, a new way to lose one's mind. We've been seeing the symptoms all over the forum:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=6070232>

Anyway, back to the point at hand: He'll probably end up going to court over that one single tweet. It's good for those who are willing to buy stock now, seeing how the prices will obviously recover at some point, but maybe you should wait a bit longer and see how low it will drop for the time being.

(May 4, 2020 05:26 AM)Squanchy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why would you invest after it starts to go back up? You should buy when it bottoms to maximize profits imo

Well, mister investor, how do you determine the point at which it will hit the bottom of the current drop and do you have any idea when exactly this would be? ?

The person you've replied to is attempting a "safe" investment strategy. Certainly, the profits won't be as high as they could be if you were willing to take more risks, but it's a strategy that has worked for many people. Determining that point in time at which the prices will stop dropping is extremely hard but feel free to share your insider information for us if you have any (do keep in mind that financial fraud is forbidden here and trading with the help of insider information is illegal in many countries).

I don't know what to say about this.

I think he learned from past experience with tweeting in order to stimulate stock prices and this time he just gave his opinion, not saying that he might do something as he did in the last tweet.

Anyway, Elon is a genius, I don't think he'd do it if he knew he'd get in big trouble.

I'm pretty sure that if a CEO (or another important person) of a company publicly speaks out and says that the prices of their company's stock are too high, is pretty damn aware of the consequences that it can have. You don't even have to be a "genius" to figure that one out. It might be a personal opinion of his, but he has essentially fucked over many people with the click of a button, depending on how you look at it, and I'm pretty sure those people he fucked over will want some sort of "justice".

I guess time will tell how this story will end but I'm predicting that it won't be pretty for Elon. If it turns out that he bought more stock during the drop, things will definitely be a lot worse.

I'm not saying I agree with any of this, but just applying some common sense and playing out this particular scenario.

I've had this conversation before with others, about the fact that he "fucked people over".

That person went as far as telling me that he just "ruined somebody's retirement funds".

First of all, the drop was just 10%, which isn't enough to ruin anyone.

Second of all, Tesla is a company continuously growing, and the prices will go back in no-time. If people would just hold there won't really be an issue.

Yes, he might have fucked over some people that were going to sell their stocks because they need money now, but still, 10% isn't enough to accuse somebody else of ruining other's life.

Maybe I'm too much of a fan-boy and my admiration of Elon creates a tunnel vision to me, so that's what everything I said above is strictly my opinion and I'm open to discussing it freely.

Allow me to play the devil's advocate for a second.

If you're trading with borrowed money, that 10% really does make a difference. Sometimes, even a 1% drop could ruin someone. That someone would be extremely idiotic, but it's not unheard of. The higher your investment goes, the more money you lose, obviously. But then again, the stock market is always a bit of a gamble. You can't always recuperate your money.

Let's say we replace Elon Musk with the Corona virus for a second. You could, for example, take the Corona virus to court as well for causing so many drops in stock values but that would obviously be ridiculous and not work out at all so there is definitely some truth to what you're saying and to him having the right to having a personal opinion but I'm afraid that we'll have to wait and see what will come out of this. I'm not specialized in trading laws or even investments but I'm absolutely certain that he will be dragged to court by some people. Rest assured though, everyone can be dragged to court, it's ultimate the outcome of the visit that's important here.

Ps: you don't have to defend your opinions by saying you're allowed to have them. We're having a friendly and pleasant discussion here. No one is attacking anyone. Just two people playing out the different sides of a story and at the end of the day we could still come together and smoke a cigar together (after the lockdown is lifted of course).

I was always against investing / gambling with borrowed money.

I'm going as far as calling it stupid when people buy cars with loans or other luxury products. (Yes, some people really need a car in order to go to work or to the store because they live in a far rural area, but there is a difference between buying a car you can afford and one you can't.)

I was a gambler myself, working a month just to gamble it all in one night and repeat the circle, so I feel entitled to call gambling when you can't afford to lose extremely stupid.

I'm that type of guy that never takes a loan/borrow money for anything, being it a house, a car or to feed myself when I can't afford it.

I can't go for the devil's advocate in this situation as, in my opinion, when someone trades with borrowed money they're 100% responsible for it, no matter what external thing causes them to lose.

I agree with that, everyone can be dragged to court and I bet he will be, but I strongly believe there will be no real outcome. I agree, we just have to wait and see.

Pennywise - May 4, 2020, 7:45 am

It's not Elon fault if people are stupid, reacting to a tweet. I mean, he just said that he thinks the stock valuation is too high. That's it.

He didn't sold patents to competition.
He didn't destroy Tesla's Gigafactory.

He didn't made something bad to have Tesla valuation drop.

It's not Elon fault if people in 2020 are ridiculously stupid.

Btw, yeah, he'll probably go to court, because we're living in a nonsense world. I hope he's gonna be okay though. I wouldn't be surprised if things turn bad for him. I mean, our governments love to destroy great people such as Julian Assange for example. This guy is a hero and yet isn't considered as one.

Very nice. I invested 1.8M in BTC when it dropped from the virus. Already pretty much doubled my investment. Super happy about that. Thinking of cashing out and spreading the profits. Was thinking Tesla but I have other places I can invest that have slightly less return but are more secure.
