IPIKIN - May 4, 2020, 12:34 am

Growing up what was your favourite Pokemon? Mine would have been Charizard. Mainly because he was the most expensive card

Dr. Einyel - May 4, 2020, 12:35 am

Pikachu have been always my fav. I'm a simple man.

Astrogen - May 4, 2020, 12:37 am

I've played with Pokemon Emerald back in the day, (also played recently but just for a short time), I love Mudkip, he was a starter pokemon and he's the one I picked and still even the one I usually pick when I start new games.

shreder - May 4, 2020, 12:40 am

Charizard was my favorite also remember watching him first transform always liked charizard.

I believe starters are different on each game version. What starter pokemon did you pick?

Exalted - May 4, 2020, 12:51 am

Haunter, no specific reason, I just like him.

I only heard about them recently (few weeks ago), got bored playing though so I stopped. I only play games when I'm bored but I don't really game now, just a few minutes - hours in a week.

Not really like that, you just play the same way as the normal game but you can duel other people, join tournaments, trade pokemon, items, and stuff like that. But overall, the game is just the same as the normal one, the duel thing is just optional (not really needed to win/rank up in the game). Would be nice to battle gym leaders controlled by a human.

SaintJimmy - May 4, 2020, 1:45 am

Cyndaquil. It looked both cute and tough to me. And when it evolved into a Typhlosion, it was by far the most beautiful thing that I have ever laid my eyes on. It was also severely over leveled compared to the other Pokémon I've seen because I thought they would make cute pets.

I was in school back then and didn't know what Pokemons are back then. I saw one of my friends with a deck which I assumed as playing cards and I was planning to confront him as our teachers had strict rules about playing cards because of the potential gambling by the senior students. He gave me that card which eventually hooked me up with the saga.

Unrelated but I gave my first push-up after seeing Goku training. Lol. Just felt like sharing.
