this is an obvious meme but it holds truth to an extent. i'm looking at you, ebook sellers.

And a CEO is a guy that runs an one-man unregistered, online business.

SIM-3257834 - May 13, 2020, 6:51 pm

HF hustlers, doing online surveys for $5 per day for hours of work.

B?????araka - May 13, 2020, 6:53 pm

It is what it is.... You know it's noobs here.

i'm being serious because unlike 80% of the kids on HF i actually work from home doing my own business. ???

selling stuff on hf is only a side hustle, i make like $250 - $400 a day with my actual work and an additional $20 - $60 a day from HF.

(it's not 30 days, all payments on this account were received in the last 2 weeks but they only have a 7 day and 30 day option for filtering)

+ the like $500 in BTC i received this week and the $300 in my cashapp from yesterday

Tesla - May 13, 2020, 9:36 pm

I've spent many years on here networking, collaborating and meeting a variety of businesses driven people. I have to say only about 10% of these people actually know what they're doing and I have built many long lasting business partnerships with these few people.

Spiritual - May 13, 2020, 10:54 pm

Typically anyone who says they're an entrepreneur is definitely not that's not a title you give to yourself anyways.

Shrooms - May 13, 2020, 10:56 pm

It's always been like this here, and always will be

Shadow_Cloud - May 13, 2020, 11:00 pm

Honestly I even see this in real life. Not even just an HF thing.

I interview a ton of people and typically the fancier the title the less the candidate actually knows about what happens on the ground. I'm pretty sure I've hired a grad that will code circles around some "Lead Technical Architect" while schooling him on the theory of why some things work and others don't.

On top of that, titles mean literally nothing. "Any man who must say, I am the king, is no true king."

I came across several users claiming that they have a lot of clients and they're professional at what they do, but they barely know shit about the task I give them. Just few were actually legit workers.

IKR???

I was once uploading an online Stock Management system on my Linux server and kept running into an error every time i tried accessing the website. I got frustrated and asked someone here on HF to do it.

First, the retard decided to charge me $50 just for setting it up. Which was ridiculously overpriced but, I was in a rush so I said fuck it. I gave that user root access to my server so he can set it up and he kept telling me: "where da cpanel bro? where i upload files?". He thought i was using a Web hosting with cpanel and I continuously told him it's a VPS not a web hosting.

It doesn't end here! The idiot ended up deleting all my files on the server, causing Apache to malfunction. Keep in mind the retard mentioned he has several years of experience in web development and so on. Luckily he refunded me the money. Despite searching for someone to help me figure out where the error was coming from I ended up fixing it by myself. I knew I couldn't rely on someone from HF claiming they have "YEARS OF PROFESHENAL EXPERYANCE"

The sad part is there are probably a small number of people actually making big money selling the courses. Of course they probably make very little from their "method" but selling content generates revenue.

Just curious, how exactly do you make your online money??

(May 14, 2020 04:20 PM)Lindros Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Just curious, how exactly do you make your online money??

I do website / software work for local businesses and I have some pay me up to $200 a month to keep their websites hosted & images on them updated.

I also run a SaaS (Software as a Service) that is a full tattoo shop management system and for $150 a month you get online consent forms with photo ID upload, tattoo artist tax forms, profit graphs, inventory logs, etc.

and then i'm on a couple of forums offering cheap software ($5 - $10) because it typically brings in $20 - $40 a day and it's autopilot through selly.io most the money i make i try to invest in something as well. so if i make $500 on something i'll put like $250 - $300 of it into making a new website or service to try to monetize. if it fails, i sell the entire project for the exact amount i put into it.

This is true, not only on HF, but also on Instagram, Facebook, and irl.

People are destroying the value of the term 'Entrepreneur'.
