Thread: How easily people feel free to allege you .

SMS GURU - May 14, 2020, 11:49 pm

whether it's a deal or real life, people feel free to allege you being not a trustworthy person. I provide some digital marketing service, posted a comment that I can send someone any SMS with sender ID.

A user added me and said make my phone number as sender ID. which gone through registration protocols, although I shown him by sending SMS to his own number from different sender that it's not a big deal to use your number but to make numeric sender ID as custom phone number will cost you first.

and he didn't like my words, instantly he wrote that avoid dealing with me because I am liar and will take some one money.

why people don't understand sometimes, because they are already hurt or being scammed by someone ??

But it doesn't mean every one is doing the same thing. we shouldn't being a judgmental person in real life, I may say its precaution but you cant make a judgement for someone this way.

Sadly scammers ruin it for everyone. I've been scammed and if I sense something fishy or answers to stall of get off the subject I try to avoid dealing with the individual. Depending I. Will let my peers know to be cautious when dealing.

Most people will deal with caution if they do not know you or if you have no reputation. Gain some reputation, have some successful transactions and deals and you will soon gain the trust of others.

Yes what he said. It's all building trust.

Sorry to hear you experienced this, sometimes you'll just encounter unpleasant people and there's little to nothing you can do to sort them out.
