

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Amazon Merch & Teespring

Austerity - May 18, 2020, 1:30 am

I have recently been looking into Amazon Merch & Teespring as a secondary income method. I tend to look for autopilot secondary income methods as I work full time and find it very difficult to manage my time. For those of you who do not know what Amazon Merch or Teespring is, well it is a e-commerce platform that allows anyone, anywhere, to create and sell products online. For example you can design your product, set a price with a profit margin and begin selling it. Teespring/Amazon cover the costs of production, shipping and handling etc. This is what drives a large audience towards these platforms as there is no inventory risk at all.

Has anyone experienced successes using these websites? Should I invest in several t shirt designs and a possible successful niche? What do you recommend? I'm open to all opinions.

SpookyD - May 18, 2020, 2:32 am

If the the whole chain is dumbed down to that it might be tempting because of the low entry barrier.

Do consider that the entry level to POD in general, was always super low. and that this niche is saturated.

On the other hand, because its so personalized, you can always tailor cool products for X audience, so in a way its also evergreen.

Like many things in eCommerce, this will come down to proper execution, but it sounds like it can be done.

CPA Exposé - May 18, 2020, 3:52 pm

The key is to get good at marketing. The T shirts are secondary if you plan to do well here.

Austerity - May 19, 2020, 3:36 am

(May 18, 2020 03:20 AM)yulracso Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I tried tee spring a couple times and didn't have success with it - what I learned is that you need to be very good at running Instagram and Facebook ads to be successful and even more so to be profitable in this niche. Like you said, there's no inventory risk but it's all about how you can get customers to your site which is very challenging with all the competition.

(May 18, 2020 03:52 PM)Crumbs Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The key is to get good at marketing. The T shirts are secondary if you plan to do well here.

I agree, marketing is a very powerful skill, and if you use it wisely it can bring great success.

The Pact - December 4, 2020, 3:41 am

There are YouTubers claiming you don't have to do any marketing and that the Teespring does it for you.

Options Trading - December 5, 2020, 12:05 pm

I'm trying to get into this today, should be interesting and hopefully works out

samueldad - February 21, 2021, 3:48 pm

Hello , pleas i need a method to get approved on merch by amazon

Austerity - March 15, 2021, 12:18 am

(Feb 21, 2021 04:48 PM)samueldad Wrote: CITE Hello , pleas i need a method to get approved on merch by amazon

There is many methods online, I personally paid for a course which guided me through the process.

I can send you some tips via private message.