Thread: Largest Scams

Fairly new and it got me thinking after I saw many disputes. What's the biggest scam that happened on HackForums? How much was it for and how did it happen?

Vibe - May 18, 2020, 10:54 am

I'd say this is up there

User called Anonymous, he scammed for ALOT of money. $50k+ atleast.

Oh look, I've found a thread about him. This was back in 2014:

Thanks for this, interesting read to refresh some memories. So many of the replies from people who were "big" at that time and got closed later

Why did such a large transaction not involve any middlemen or 3rd parties at that time?

Let's say I scam you;

And I tell you it'll take like 3 days before I have "time" to give my product to you, you wait 3 days. But in these 3 days I scam others. That's how he kinda did it.

That was certainly a wild ride. I remember I wore Anonymous' signature for a vpn a day and he gave me $100 for it. All i remember was something about doing coke, someone meeting up with him or something. It was a long story.

Bacardi Cola Lime - May 18, 2020, 1:48 pm

Didn't know the Anonymous scam so I'm gonna read about it know since it's so major. The biggest scam I've read about here would be like 2-3k$ worth of scam.

Disturbed - May 18, 2020, 2:06 pm

I could imagine someone selling a "useless" ebook or product to multiple users in a short period of time could startle the general audience. Usually, members on forums gather a sufficient amount of positive rep and beef up their accounts in order to pose as trusted or reputable. In the end, it's not worth the gamble.

B?????araka - May 18, 2020, 4:15 pm

I wish to never EVER make it on a thread like this or a list. I've been scammed before and its not fun smh.

I think it is related to HF code or script posting. Not sure what causes that but im sure its very simple.

If you are posting links that work for you and not in post im sure its HF. not sure what you mean exactly, if its working outside of your posts im thinking that.. its just pruned shit?

The profile links don't work for me as well. I have a collection of posts, threads and users I find interesting. I just posted the profile links blindly without checking if they were pruned.

Wasn't there a 'theory' that the real Anonymous died and others scammed using his account?

I never heard of that theory lol, don't think the real one has died.

I did hear the theory of it not or never being him though, there's a bunch of conspiracies surrounding that account, has been for years.

edit: All I know is when I signed up for HF originally they posted very differently than they did at the end.

Omg, I remember those 2 threads, not going to lie they were HUGE when they first dropped.

You know how 6ix9ine broke the internet with his song after he got out of prison? It was basically the same thing here; Anonymous broke HF with that thread.

Only a handful of people I know do I trust to listen to regarding that account, and from what I've been told at one point it was indeed someone extremely legit, I was shown certain screenshots that lead me to believe certain things were all too real. Since then those screenshots are long gone with basically any user from that time who'd be trustworthy, really all but 2 or 3 users are gone.

I also have a really good idea of where the real Anonymous (or the real Anon from that threads origin) lives based off of what they said in that thread. I'm not sure if the details given out were intentional or not, but nevertheless those details described in almost detail of where he MIGHT be from if you use a map and actual geography to try and pinpoint the area based on the facts given.

You made multiple posts on that thread, I made one huge post and a couple others, and a few others questioned it as well yet all the customers still poured in.

People really need to read up on what they're about to spend hundreds of dollars on.

All the people that were considered as you said "big" members back then are gone now and for a lot of them it's really not surprising.

Curious to see who'll still be here in say another 5 years.
