Just pulled the trigger on $10k worth of alts. I feel like that money will easily double within a month. Will let you know how it's develops.

Current price in usd and spread

Xrp - $0.20 - 4%

I don't disagree. However it's only 4% spread so loses will be minor if it doesn't go up.

History proves that shit coins like xrp can 10x in less then a week. It was different times back then but 2x is likely.

Just a risk I willing to take at the moment.

bluud - May 28, 2020, 6:14 am

I'd split the spread of XRP and EOS equally. I don't like XRP as a coin but as you stated above, others do and it likes to go up.

You maybe right if we going down from here, however I normally trade the trend of TA and a lot of coins are flipping support on 100 and 200 ma so that's my reasoning behind it I guess.

Eos has a lot of things coming soon block one are getting more and more involved I can see a major pump happening if things continue to rise.

If atom breaks 100 day and claims it as support on the daily I might dabble a bit.

And than all alt coin show their strengt.

But i earn profit from both situation with KoinPro. KoinPro gives a chance to btc short and long with 100× leverage. So i can trade in both situation and earn profit.

Nice bag OP, you've drawn my attention to beam. Looking at the daily graph it looks like it could break a long downtrend in the next few weeks if it holds support between 0.41-0.44. 50 day MA just crossed 100 day, low marketcap also so could be a money maker, are you looking to re-enter at any point?

Eos looks like it's about to make a run in the next 4 weeks. I think I should have put that money in other coins first and now swapped into eos. However it's very hard to get everything right so I will continue to hold for now.

Link potentially ran out of gas for now maybe worth moving some profits into other projects but I can see this running towards $40. However I will still see how everything develops and might even move everything into usd once we hit 15k btc as I would expect a pull back from there.

It's difficult to predict, will need to see how things develop and continue to keep a close eye on new projects coming up.

I am interested in seeing how avax (avalanche) performs once released on exchanges.

For now I am reluctant to move anything. Will potentially take some profits when we hit $15k btc. Will need to review the charts and see what kind of news we get.

In general Q4 for crypto has been very healthy in the past especially when Q3 is so bullish

No I am just using what I have for now. I rarely drop fresh money into the market unless I can see a clear bottom and fresh bull market emerging.

I do a lot of research and read a lot of articles. I try to find new hot coins that haven't pumped a lot. I also look at few old ones with good tech that have potential to become big.

Not every investment is a win of course sometimes you have to take an L.

I've been doing this since 2016 and normally can spot patterns that might have a break out.

Hype is good to follow but have to be careful as you can get burnt very quickly.

Just so you guys are aware I've closed all my positions earlier today once we broke 360$ on eth.

I am currently mainly sitting in usdt apart from xrp and eos as these haven't had a proper bounce yet and I might buy more if they dip further.

I also have a small amount of BnB cashaa and cro.

I've cashed out around 12k and have about 4-5k left in.

From the initial entry of 10k I have taken 2k cash profit. $10k left to buy back in later and 5k left worth of crypto still in. So a total of about 7k profit. Could have had a bit more but happy with my return.

I will probably return with an update once I buy back in. Good luck guys.

Next few weeks I expect a crazy alt rally. We might see bitcoin push above all time highs and alts will finally be catching up shortly after.

Currently the alt market cap is nowhere near all time highs, this will change. Make sure you in the right alts though. Not everything will pump.

Don't make me post the 50-60% daily dumps that xrp did ? What means outperformed? Whales pumped the coin so it can go 40% up then dumped so it can go 60% down and they make profit? Come on.

If anyone trades/"invests" into these coins he wants profit and IT'S THE SAME like gambling in a casino. There's 100% no difference.

I'm talking about the last run as in 2017, if you invested the same amount in XRP and BTC at the start of 2017 and sold at the top you'd make 26x on XRP what you would have on BTC. This out-performance was the case for all OG majors: Ethereum (8x what you would have made on BTC) , Litecoin (4.5x), Stellar (18x), Monero (1.7x), Dash (7x). Were you even in Crypto back then?

The dump you're talking about on XRP occurred on the same day as the Bitcoin dip and is certainly correlated. The whales didn't dump harder on XRP, there's 3x more liquidity on BTC than XRP so dips are obviously more exaggerated on the latter. Refer to said BTC dip on the BTC/EUR pair rather than the BTC/USD pair and you'll see this in action.

Even if you compare ROI since the dip in March, even with these dumps on XRP you're talking about you'd still be up more money than on BTC. Again, same case with majors ETH, XLM, XMR, ADA, BNB, etc. Don't let your maximalism blind you to profit, because it is undeniably there in alts to a higher degree than BTC historically. By no means am I saying the history is guaranteed to repeat itself but the upside potential is certainly there. Also if you think BTC price isn't controlled by whales then you're mistaken.

As I said, I'm on the same side as you, I only see Bitcoin as the one certainty in Crypto, but I'm open to holding alts for profit. You're wrong also saying it's the same as gambling at a casino, have you heard of risk management? It's the single most important thing for anyone trading, if you have your stops in place at the right levels and you stick to your risk management strategy then you will have no issues, particularly in a bull market. You don't even need to do much trading, if you rotate portions of your portfolio efficiently through majors you can make more money than you would make on simply holding Bitcoin.

If you want a guaranteed win. Buy eth at any point this month and hold until February the 8th when CME is planned to release future trading for eth. This was just announced today!

This still has to be approved but it will continue pumping until futures are release.

Enjoy your profit in the next 2 months

Oh, that's neat. I didn't know ETH futures are releasing on CME. Didn't BTC have a huge rally to 19k days after news of futures coming on CME back in '17?

This could very well take ETH past previous ATH.

I am conflicted lol. Keep stocking up on BTC or buy more ETH?

Exactly what everyone will be thinking and likely will send eth above $2k per coin in the next 2 months. I would expect peak to be anywhere between 5-10k depending on what happens with the futures approval. Will likely be delayed until December 2021

I still think eth is the best most promising coin for the next month.

I still believe a huge correction is coming soon. I am not sure exactly when but we could see 60k btc before we drop back down to 14-18k range again. This will be a very sharp and painful rejection.

The hype around crypto is a little worrying right now. Making me think it's time to bail. But I am patiently waiting.

I will post a coin when I see a good set up right now I am just comfortably holding eth and dot for now.

Link looks like it had a huge retrace and potentially could rally 100% back up. It's speculation though not as guaranteed as the xrp, grt and doge calls so far. Patience is key more opportunities will come.

Key now is not to get too greedy as all gain can be wiped over night

Congrats to everyone who held eth through the last dip. We are almost at 1k.

5k target before February!

I have a hard time believing we'll see BTC at $14k. I think we'll threaten $18k but stay within the $20k+ for the most part. A lot of support is going to be at the $20k level. People aren't gonna bail like they did in 2018 imho. Investors are starting to understand what it is to HOLD Bitcoin. And my guess is that holders won't sell this time for FOMO. In 2018 a lot of people were profit taking, I expect a lot less of that. Even those who got rich might think, "well I'll just sell 5% of what I have and hold the rest". It's STUPID to sell your whole portfolio now and it's becoming more obvious that Bitcoin is the clear winner in the crypto space. Alts on the other hand might get punished hard.

Long term I would probably agree bitcoin is safe haven. However the real money and massive ROI is within alts. It will be much harder to pick gems this time round though.

Definitely be careful when investing. The drop will be harsh when it comes.

Well that's exactly what I am doing with this portfolio. I basically made over 50k with 10k I wouldn't have been able to do that by just simply holding bitcoin.

Trading and jumping into a good TA set up is crucial to accumulate more bitcoin.

I am not saying that holding bitcoin alone isn't smart. I am just saying there is way better ROI potential in alts. Key is to jump back into btc or usdt or eth at the right time. Of course that's not always possible and over trading is probably the biggest profit killer for most traders. I may only do 1-3 trades a week maximum. Sometimes none. Being out of a position is sometimes more profitable then being in one.
