Ripper can be very good if used correctly

Any brute force programs effectiveness will depend on the machine deploying it

If you are running a brute force attack against a file on a chromebook.....

Your going to have a bad time

If you hook in a warehouse sized mining rig made of the newest spec gpus..

You have a shot at quite a lot until you get into 4096

i think brute-forcing will be your only choice here but if you look around you might find an exploit that bypasses the password requirement
