Why I joined HackForums? I can't believe I'll of been here 10 years in the next couple weeks. But if I remember correctly, I was originally browsing for a forum that taught hacking because it fascinated it. I wound up reading up on SQL injection/defacing sites and just was immediately hooked.

My experience here is that this community of individuals is certainly unique in their own ways. You can easily make yourself out to be a joke and/or incompetent with just a few moves, so you got to be careful.

I sent you +3 thanks again.

I joined HF originally to learn about RATS and hacking and stuff. Now it's more so crypto, making money and lounging.

Yanix - June 11, 2020, 8:08 pm

Why I joined HF is simply because I want to learn something about hacking and looks some different ideas and methods about internet marketing as well :D

My experience here is totally awesome...I found some great people and I am enjoying my stay day by day. There's a lot of perks you will get to enjoy the forum.

+1 Rep and Posting to enter thank you

"why you joined HF" and "What is your experience in here"

I joined HF to know how to earn money online legally to learn some methods. My experience is that this is a unique place. Here are many guys which have some good skills. It's a big forum but on the other side this community looks like a big family

Artisan - June 12, 2020, 3:58 am

I joined up to look to learn as much as I could from the knowledgeable ones here. However, I got too preoccupied with studies and work and so I couldnt get much active here. I was more like a silent observer, just keeping my mouth shut and checking in from time to time.

I have had minimal experience here coz of the above reasons, however, I think this is an awesome place. Apart from the exit scammers and shitty ebook sellers and skiddies, the rest are quite chill and nice people.

I have +1 Popped you. I joined HF to learn new things including programming. As for my experience, I met many kinds of people. Some friends, many scammers. I have not been scammed personally.

Also, I have seen many unnecessary bans with no reasons given in this forum which makes me not want to spend too much time/money on it. Someday, all that I have put into it may just vanish due to a ban for no reason. Happened to a group of people I know. I see the potential for this forum but if the childish attitude is constantly displayed from the top, it'll just be a ripple effect affecting the rest of the forum.

You can already see that it is no longer as active as it was 2 months back. Enough of ranting about my 2 months of experience here.

All the best to everyone.

Thanks for the giveaway buddy!

Dropped you a +3

I joined hf on my friend's recommendation as a good source for earning and knowledge!
I have learnt a lot from here but
More than the marketplace/guides I stayed because of the wonderful community and willing to do so for many more years to come!
I'd Like to win as the hard times are breaking me economically down and every bit counts :)
Anyway thanks for hosting this contest :)
Good luck to everyone participating Cheers!

I remember me searching for a forum to learn hacking, like any edgy person would do in his early teens. HackForums came up first on my good search for a hack forum, obviously. Never actually learned how to hack, but I learned other things and met great people. I made my first money here and I still make my beer money here!

Gave you positive popularity rating and this is my first entry post. Thank you for hosting <3

?Dødgygeez - June 26, 2020, 1:52 pm

Why I joined HackForums:

6 years ago I really loved the idea of pentesting and I wanted to learn more about SQL injection methods. I also wanted to expand my programming knowledge for use in developing my own programs for my own personal experience on my desktop computer. Whitehat hacking was really appealing to me as much as blackhat hacking was also, although I only wanted to get into blackhat methods so I could brag about it while I was in school.

My experience:

Over the years I realised I cared less about the reason I joined because I compared myself with more experienced uses too much and I come to decide I actually cared more about making money. I started to learn a lot about cryptocurrency and the community itself. I just read a thread about Hackforums 10th anniversary and I shared my experience there also. This forum has taught me ever so much and I still turn to HackForums to learn more in specific areas. I get a lot of my knowledge online when I need to know something, but if I can't find it online I can always learn here on HF or at least get some pointers. The community is amazing and I can't believe how helpful other members are. There are so many interesting stories to be heard and the history of HF is outstanding and I hope my memories never leave me. This site took up so much of my childhood and has shaped me in a significant way into the man I am today.

Thank you for hosting and good luck to everyone <3
