Thread: How long before I dispute a contract?

Goods - June 11, 2020, 12:04 pm

Is there a specified amount of time before I should dispute a contract with another member?
Couldn't find anything that said a specified a time length.

It's been 2 days since I made payment with no contact since. If there isn't a specified time, how long should I wait? It was only 400$ but, the fact of the matter still stands. I hate a thief.

Nate - June 11, 2020, 12:06 pm

There isn't a length of time, its whatever you feel is appropiate, Has the member been online since last conversing with him?

And personally for me, I would do it a day later at least 12-14 hours after payment was sent and whatever you did wasn't fulfilled.

Angela White - June 11, 2020, 12:08 pm

I think 2 days is more than enough, if someone received $400 from you and hasn't had ANY time at all in the last 2 days to at least contact you and say something came up, then they're probably trying to be a scumbag.

flavoral - June 11, 2020, 12:08 pm

1. Wrong section.
2. There's no "official" time.

It's kinda case by case.

$400 is no low amount, if you feel something phishy or been scammed and the other party is not responding, you have the right to open a DD.

It's been almost exactly 48 hours since I made payment. I have proof of everything so, I'm not worried. Just was really looking forward to what he was "supposedly" making me.

If i were in your predicament i would file for a dispute, especially if he hasn't given you a time frame on when It will be completed.

Has he been online since payment?

Oh, is this what I think it is? I thought you were doing a currency exchange or something.

I apologize for the wrong area post. I didn't want to offend the other party just in case he is busy with something else but, it just seems phishy that I paid him and he hasn't been online basically since then.

screw his feelings if he's avoiding to complete the deal. Is it Glein Snow ?

He already have an open DD:

Yeah it's what you think it is. I should have used a MM.

It is him unfortunately. I think he may have got one over on me.

If it's with the user who the other guy linked above, you 100% got scammed. The guy who has an open DD with that user ended up paying me to do what that user scammed him for. I saw what the buyer received and everything & yeah. His contract isn't lying, he literally received an empty HTML document with a single `<img src="">` with a screenshot of GTA 5 inside of it, and it took him like 5 days to "complete".

He has not been online since payment which has been around 48 hours.

Well that's super unfortunate I suppose. 400$ down the drain I guess.

I'd just go on and create a deal dispute now to prevent him doing the same to other users.

I'm going to wait till I get home to possibly give him some more time and I'm at work and don't want to upload all the proof via my phone.

I'm filing it tonight when I get home. Can't do it from my phone at work.

If someone disappears in the middle of the deal for no reason and if it isn't agreed, then open it after four or five hours. I'd wait longer only if it's the kind of deal where both parties are probably from a totally different time zone and can be completed with slower but sincere steps.

You did his graphic for his sales thread. He says he's from California so there is a time change. During the whole deal he's never been gone for this long. It's got me spooked for sure.

Yin Yang - June 11, 2020, 4:39 pm

I think it shouldn't take longer than a couple of days to respond.

Oof I remember the conversation we had. I hope everything goes as planned.

Bad thing is, is I did exactly what you said. He claimed he had completed it and shit.

V?rt - June 11, 2020, 4:59 pm

There's no specific length of time, but I would say an hour is reasonable. 2 days is entirely too long, definitely make a dispute for that.

Ridx1 - June 11, 2020, 5:03 pm

u open it within minutes after the deal as no reason should take more then 5 mins to send your money

Herbert - June 11, 2020, 5:06 pm

It depends,

- CE within an hour time.
- Service/product within 24-48 hours without update.

I agree with these! There is no reason to have consistent contact during a currency exchange and then to be ghosted after payment for up to an hour.

As far as a product or service it should be as long as you agreed that would take.
