I bought a Springfield XD-S Mod.2 9mm. I'm planning on buying a WASR-10 AK soon also and I'll post pics. What did y'all buy?

Deany - June 15, 2020, 8:54 am

Well technically you just need to pass a background test and not be currently using any drugs.

X-32 - June 15, 2020, 8:59 am

I haven't bought one yet, but I almost did.

I panicked and went to take the firearm test, which is required here in California before purchasing a gun. I still plan to get one in the near future though.

Ah Commiefornia, the state you can buy weed no questions asked (which is awesome don't get me wrong) but you can't quickly exercise your 2nd amendment right to bear arms without jumping through flaming hoops and sacrificing your first born child.

Yep, it's shitty here.

No panic buying required. I have sufficient means already. I'd post a picture but there was a tragic boating accident.

I do kind of want to try out the new 6mm ARC at some point though. Probably still a few years away from mainstream availability.

Also just for lols (can skip to 2:33):

I went in to the Gun store yesterday and they were sold out of most AR's and had only 3 AKs on the shelf.

It's crazy how that sentence can be a mind boggled for someone in a country where defending yourself is frowned upon, no offense at all I just love my guns.

Oh that's a confirmed fact. There have been nearly double the amount of background checks run this year compared to last year for March through May. Coronavirus caused a massive spike in buying, but then rioting caused an even bigger spike in sales. The "defund the police" thing has quickly caused the biggest spike yet pretty much only to rival Obama being elected president in 2008.

I don't think its frowned upon in any country to defend yourself. Its just different countries have different things. For example in the UK we just like to stab eachother. Its more fun!

A ton of people have been stocking up. I live across the street from a gun store. The first 1-2 months of COVID they had a 10-20 person line out the door during their hours of operation. Even today they still have a crowd people waiting outside for them to open. It isn't as busy as March/April but it is busier than December/January/February (months before COVID).

Why on earth would you want such an abomination of a device? Grip safeties suck. It's something that can get caught on a holster and makes it harder to handle in a situation where you might want the gun to go bang without having a perfect grip. I'm not against safeties entirely as they can prevent stupid mishaps for some, but the best safety is keeping fingers and foreign objects clear of the trigger.
