Thread: Got Scammed Offsite Through Cashapp

Tesla - June 21, 2020, 2:04 am

Hey so I was trying to buy airbnb giftcards and I got scammed by two people in a row. I've never felt so dumb before, am I better off trying to resolve this with cashapp or calling up by bank?

Advice to everyone out there: Stay away from telegram

Voxcon - June 21, 2020, 2:11 am

If i were you, i'd contact both. Even if cashapp thinks that they are "not responsible" for your mistake and won't be interested in helping you, your bank will be and will most likely be able to get your money back.

use cashapp on close people, you trust.. not stuff like that.

You probably wont get it back. They are hard to even get in contact with (CA) and the bank will blame them and CA blames them the bank ... bs.

How much money are you talking about here?

CA is useless in terms of getting in contact with. Like seriously, is there one person here that ever accomplished that? even there support number was just there to say they dont offer support via phone. Then someone said they dont support via email either.

Imao how tf do they support then

lol

Dont report it unauthorized if its small cheese bruh

if you do that they may make you cut your card and make you get a new one for fraud reasons.

And if that happens, you will not have a say in the matter. Not with my bank anyway.

Why did you deal on Telegram man...?

Its like asking to be scammed, especially when the other party request payment in cashapp.

5 fricken days with no card cause BOA and this corona shit. Chase has always seemed to hook me up on getting refunds and such on bullshit like this. I think I'm just going to call them and explain the situation how I got hardcore scammed by broke indians, or would I be better off reporting it unauthorized?

Either or -

They like your business so they'd trust your explanation.

Simply say you were buying something online, virtual item and they scammed you.

I would suggest you do contact the bank, but don't report it unauthorised. I would suggest just telling the truth and telling them you've been done. I don't know about where you are, but in the UK, banks are generally quite understanding, and do a lot to help customers who have been a victim of fraud or other scams.

I would just say that reporting a transaction as unauthorised when it actually wasn't is technically fraud and could get you into trouble if you were found out.

Ya I have had a problem like this before, and I just called and explained my situation and they reversed the payments. Going to do the same but I unfortunately can't get on the phone with anyone at chase due to covid
