Thread: Found an Bug in Online Casinos.

Meeetirm - June 24, 2020, 7:01 am

Hey HF.

Im new here and i don't know if this is right place for this.

I found out a bug on Few online casino's. When depositing with certain Payment Provider Service i was credited money on my Casino account, but it didn't withdraw from my bank account.

In total i have successfully did it in 3 online casino.
All of 3 are certified by Askgamblers

I waited about month or so, and i contacted casino and ask them if everything was all right with my payments. Their response was: everything is fine.

So my question is what should i do.

1. Continue with exploiting bug
2. Report it to casino and payment provider service
3. Share this with people until they patch it up.

Make a contract with them and get a shit load of money in return.

It is obviously a troll post, but for the slim slim slim chance this is even remotely real ill answer honestly and that would be obviously report it to the casino and payment provider services but then again.. i'm sure this is just non-sense so do whatever you feel like :)

 - 1) Are you sure that it's not pending? I know some stock broker it can take a week+ before it's deducted from your account.
 - 2) If they have your credentials, they will likely see who all used that payment method in the past and deduct it from your account, or possibly worse.
 - 3) You could email them and ask if they pay for high risk bug bounties.

I would rather help the company out. If it's an AskGamblers issue they could probably offer you something hefty for it. Some bug bounty programs pay well, others don't at all. It could be an issue on your bank side of things as well.

It is not pending, since money i have deposited was returned to my bank account. But i was credited money in casino.

I can't get in anymore details, because people will figure it out.

I can prove it to admin or mods, i can send proof. If they are willing to participate.

What are chances that i will get reward money?

Search their website for bug bounties. If not send them a direct email, and just let them know that it is a high risk bug. I'm sure they'll figure it out soon when they look at their reports if they're not getting any money. How long has it been going on?
