Eliteforum.net

EliteForum is a newly developed forum, but we are trying to create a space for people to safely do exchanges, build reputation and simply hangout. We have an added Discord channel to the forum itself, for those whom want to communicate through voice with future verified exchangers.

At this very moment there is just light promotion going on, and therefor we are starting off slow. If you want to take a look at the site, we are currently doing some giveaways for new-members.

There is also affiliation bonuses to be claimed, and we are sharing any surplus from ad revenue at-least through the end of 2020. I hope you guys will take a look at it and give some feedback.

Anyone who is looking for potential work can contact me, with the expectation of some experience of running a MyBB forum. Hope to see you all around as I will be switching between the two forums (here and there).

Welcome! ?

Few suggestions from myself.

- Get SSL
- Change the name from "Forums" to the name of the Forums.

Once those are done - I'm sure we can review it a bit better.

Honestly I think it could look more modern , it looks quite old fashioned it is still under development, but it is a functioning forum. I have a dedicated Discord there for deals, and people can start posting and gaining some reputation. But thanks for the feedback! :)

Honestly this just looks like every other forum I've ever seen in here, and really, the bar on this one is really quite low.

Lately newer forums that get any sort of light have a good amount of work put in them to get them to where they are now. One thing I've noticed is that even the shittiest forums can grow so long as they put the effort in to make it something.

Your forum lacks originality, all in name, design, and concept. Even your thread layout for this is typical and exactly what I'd expect from something titled "EliteForum".

I remember a post by Omni himself saying Content is King, and sir you have barely any content at all. While its not impossible to grow a forum from 0, you have to at least entice your members enough to WANT to be active and help provide content. Invite a few friends to help you out and surely you won't have too much of an issue with that content part.

Another big thing for me is design, If a forums design is trash I automatically will never even consider hitting the Registration button-- the forum Ph4ntom wasn't anything special but their design was really nice and made me at least want to browse through.

Anyways, view these threads:

- Eleven reasons your forum is destined to die. by creampai \(owner of lewd.sx\)
- How to Start a Forum by Omniscient \(owner of hackforums.net\)

Both threads above are by seasoned webmasters both of which have grown communities from dust, if you really want to make your forum worth something I suggest rethinking your game plane and coming at it from another approach.

Nonetheless, good luck with your project.

I appreciate the review!

But do take into consideration that is a days work only, I wanted to make awareness for people to follow up.

I have the time, resources, money and skill to improve it. I think persistence is the key to the longevity.

There are a few unique features being worked on as we speak, hopefully they will like it. A trading system with voice-to-voice features is just one of them, a lot of people need to feel some security when dealing with BTC. I am accepting around 82 payment methods, dealing with banks and virtual items in games etc.

I'm just wondering if you're the same person that was running eliteforums about 3-7 years ago? If so PM me!

No idea what that means.

I honestly do not see why your forum would be successful and why would people even consider it? Lots of money is needed to populate a new forum.

Big E - July 18, 2020, 7:06 am

Half your sections don't even have a single thread in them. That's just pure laziness from anyone trying to run a forum.
