Thread: Google IP Connects to RAT client?

itznejcccc - June 29, 2020, 2:45 pm

Hello,

I am using AsyncRAT and I have uploaded my server to VirusTotal as a test to see how much connections I would get from one scan. I have received around 6 connections. But 5 minutes ago, a google IP connected? I haven't expected a google IP to connect?

DB-IP Geo:

IP address 23.251.148.154
Host name 154.148.251.23.bc.googleusercontent.com
IP range 23.251.143.112-23.251.154.223 CIDR
ISP Google LLC
Organization Google LLC
Country United States of America (US)
Region Virginia
City Ashburn
Time zone America/New_York, GMT-0400
Local time 17:42:16 (EDT) / 2020.06.29
Postal Code 20149

Virustotal or not, Async is a very well known RAT, it's already been analysed.

When a sample gets discovered, it is uploaded to virustotal anyway so other security researchers can analyse the file.

If this was something private or brand new, then I'd agree with you.

I've seen this happen alot with my bot as well, it seems that google and other agencies like to connect to botnets and run random exes they scrape to sandbox them for behavioral analysis.

why they do it i do not know.

Read this post very carefully, as it will save your life.

You need to burn everything related to your RAT, including your living space and PC. If you do not do this, police will recover evidence and arrest you on the spot.

For you see, Google is tracking you down by hacking into and hijacking VirusTotal. When you scanned your stub on VirusTotal, Google detected it was a RAT and has decided to personally track you down.

If you do not do anything:

Google WILL track you down.

You WILL be arrested.

Google will pay off whoever is in charge of your prosecution to sentence you to 20+ years, or worse.

You WILL get ass raped in prison.

You need to get packing now, as the police have already been tipped off about your activities; it's only a matter of time before they're knocking on your door.

Or VT could just use Google's "Google Cloud" service for virtual machines, who knows really.

I vouch for this statement. Even after 5 years, I am still unable to sit down

Do not run on VirusTotal, scanners like these store logs and will make sure your specific crypt is not FUD, EVER again.
