Thread: Do you see ewhoring as your full time LONG TERM job?

NeonSidee - July 5, 2020, 10:58 pm

I used to think that with my onlyfans because it's going great and it's replacing my full time job, but I know that sooner or later OF MIGHT shut down my account(fuck knows why, just some random fuck up or TOS change that would get me banned, be it in 1 month or be it in 5 years it can still happen). So it's a bit depressing to think about that I won't be able to do it for the rest of my life. I'd love to start some project or join some project if you guys are running one.

I've ran a website a bit similiar to onlyfans(but it wasnt subscription based or anything) and it was doing great as long as I put some effort in it and it started ranking in google etc, I have started getting random registrations etc. but I shut it down(sadly cuz I spent thousands on it too) because of free & bad payment gateway I was using and I couldn't afford to pay $500 for CCBill back then so I shut it down sadly.

I wish to make a living out of online stuff, that's my dream tbh but I wanna be sure it's consistant. Just imagine you make onlyfans in 2016, the amount of money you'd make now.

Making onlyfans-like sites now is quite useless, this market is super saturated and obviously something unique needs to be made.

TL;DR I don't feel like OnlyFans is going to be my #1 Long-term income source, I do not work for them, they can randomly shut me down and I simply should not rely on a company and it would be great to make my own unique company to make it online.

I'm a bit confused on your post... are you selling NSFW pictures online? Or are you building marketplaces for others to sell NSFW pictures and taking a percentage of sales? If it's the latter, then you could definitely earn a living by either working as a webdev or starting your own website and building it up. However, if you're simply selling NSFW pictures online then you have zero chance of doing that full time. If you're a male impersonating a female, selling NSFW, and essentially committing fraud, then you have a less-than-zero percent chance of doing that full time.

The whole E-whoring scene has always seemed scummy and pathetic. Men pretending to be females, talking to other straight men in hopes they'll pay them for photos. There are plenty of better ways to earn a living.

If we're talking about web development of onlyfans' style websites, then you can definetely make a full-time job out of it by selling it to other people that have the resources to make it successful.

Or you can try to do it all by yourself, however you will need to have a big budget to spend in marketing.

OnlyFans is going the same route that PayPal and Snapchat have before them. Now that they have made enough from sex, they are trying to get away from it. I know a few real women that are having problems with Onlyfans and I'm starting to hear more complaints about them from other sellers.

Treat Onlyfans the same as any other ewhoring - as a means to generate capital for something else.

A lot of girls make full time income from their Onlyfans accounts.

Do I think you can make full time income selling naked pictures?

Yes.

Do I think Onlyfans is the way to go?

At the moment yes, but sooner or later something will definitely happen (as you said yourself) so it's best to be on multiple platforms so you don't lose your audience.

Twitter, Instagram, Onlyfans, AdmireMeVIP, Snapchat, TikTok, etc.

Long term of course not, but for now there's a lot of money to be made with little effort.

If you think in terms of doing the same job all your life then you're born in the wrong time in history. There is no such security anymore.

What was wrong with your payment gateway?
