Thread: Bought ourself a new car

Stixio - July 9, 2020, 10:21 am

Hello.

Today me and my gf finally decided to purchase uself a brand new car. We bought a Audi e-tron, anyone that has this car, and thoughts?

WE GOIT IT!

SIM-3587630 - July 9, 2020, 10:23 am

Ahhh that looks amazing. That's truly a good looking car.

Its loan, but fucking happy in a age of 22 :)

Can't wait to get it. ?

crixus - July 9, 2020, 10:30 am

Congratz! Enjoy the new car you and your GF.

Nice looking car. Is it your first time purchasing new? I've always gone for used cars in the ~3-5 year old range at time of purchase.

Thanks!! Love it!!

This is first time buying new, only had like 2010 models. Tested the car today, and that was no hard choice! :D

Is it Wifi enabled? I know some newer cars are coming loaded with it... some even have wireless charging pads built in.

SIM-1349466 - July 9, 2020, 10:47 am

Nice pick, OP. Clean looking car.

Lynx - July 9, 2020, 10:53 am

Very cool car. I personally don't really like the mirrors. If there is a camera to take up space, why even bother. Do you know why they did that or was it just for aesthetics?

Hahah, funny, the mirrors are fucking trash, the car I tested had it, and its fucking horrible to use. The one I purchased has normal mirrors.
Its to save power capacity

That's pretty nice too. Don't need to get an adapter to use regular items.

Also had the option to have a small refrigerator (Had this also in a 2013 car). I never used it so didn't get it.

If you get an expensive luxury car you'll be amazed of how many things you can add from factory!

Blockonome - July 9, 2020, 11:08 am

Congratulations! I guess this will be a car for the next 10-20 years or how long you reckon it will last?

In my country we certainly can't afford Audi Car at 22 years of age.

Decent, only problem is if you needed parts (especially in my city). If I was to get a European car, would be pricey to maintain overall if something went wrong.

I agree, you should for sure to keep some money just incase anything goes wrong with the car. But you should be able to get some good miles out of it before stuff starts to go wrong. Have fun :)

so you took a 71k loan?

I hope you don't see me as if I'm shitting on the show here..but can anyone tell me why is this exactly considered an accomplishment? OP took a loan to buy this beautiful car, rather than work for a number of years in advance and save up ready money for it.

I'm personally against taking loans no matter what, living debt-free is the way. If I want something, i will save up for it. Honestly OP enjoy this car and as long as you have no problems paying the 71k back, you're good to go sir.

Again, I hope I didn't come across as negative, just curious to understand.

Again, I hope I didn't come across as negative, just curious to understand.Live your life how you want, but if OP was approved for a loan at 71k, he can afford it. There are reasons to make use of a loan that don't revolve around a lack of available cash--IE balancing monthly money I/O.

On the other hand, purchasing a vehicle with an insignificant other, such as a girlfriend, is retarded. I hope the one paying the loan is the only one on the title. Same goes for pets and houses.

I don't really think it is as long as your salary is good.
