Thread: Just played a game for the first time in 5 years

Canada Goose - July 10, 2020, 11:37 pm

The following events occurred: Joins Lobby

*Here shouting for a brief second but stops, literally half a second or so

*Game starts, I hear "f*ck your mother"

Me be like: Don't tell me...

*Game continues, halfway before it turns into a shouting match

Me be like: Slowly takes off headset, well that was a waste of money.

Now I remembered why I stopped playing, you can't mute them all and it's a huge distraction when playing.

People need to relax, it's crazy....

?ystem - July 11, 2020, 12:08 am

Yup, that's pretty much how it goes when playing games online. Although your experience reminds me so much of a Call of Duty: Modern Warfare 2 lobby. Lol. I rarely play games online anymore because of how bad it's gotten. I'll just stick to my Cribbage app.

Beherit - July 11, 2020, 1:48 am

Spot on. I don't even use my mic at that point. I don't let that stop me from playing.

Which game are you talking about? I miss those days of call of duty matches, where you would go at it with someone.

Vitello - July 11, 2020, 1:59 am

Yeah, that's why I usually stick to single player games. The toxic environment in most multiplayer games annoy the shit out of me, so I'll just stay away from them. There's no way you can talk sense into an underaged internet warrior that hates the world, lol.

Deany - July 11, 2020, 2:07 am

Yikes

I quit gaming so long ago.

Multiplayer is toxic as fuck. Literal retards.

Now I have different and BETTER hobbies

Method - July 11, 2020, 2:28 am

Imao kids these days are way too soft.

if only you got to experience old OLD cod lobbies.

edit; also I'm not saying it's cool or whatever to be toxic in games now, but surely you're missing the fun out of it. This just sounds like another Karen post.

Literally. I miss the toxic community back then, it was perfect. Now it's just a bunch of kids crying and making tiktoks about it.

Likewise, I thought I'd give it a crack again, hasn't changed a single bit..

It's not about "being soft", it's about enjoying something you pay good money for.

MightyOne - July 11, 2020, 3:23 am

Yha whale unfortunately games nowadays are HORRIBLE communities, in most of them atleast. Its really saddning to see what the community has become.

Also, use your eggs before they die ! they are already rotten :(

Well if you or me donate him a bit to help him out :D
Or he can just go on a posting spree and get ezipz nice byte amount!

Free Kurdistan - July 11, 2020, 3:42 am

It's a part of online gaming tbh. I either mute beforehand or see if people are able to communicate properly (CS:GO and LoL chat).

SIM-3587630 - July 11, 2020, 3:47 am

I remember when I was younger I could stand all the toxicity in online games, whether it was league,cod or csgo. But now that I have other things in my mind, I realized that you can't really chill by playing that kind of games, atleast not if you play solo. The only way is playing with your friends, but 90% of them just don't play anymore.

Filthy Frank - July 11, 2020, 3:56 am

Depends on what game you played tho.

I've stopped playing CoD years ago because they actually all were the same and sucked after MW2 (exception for Black ops 2, since that had a competitive mode).

Nowadays I only play with friends and don't use comms besides with them, that is so much nicer. Also, if you hate voicechat, I'd recommend the FPS/RPG-like game named Escape From Tarkov :) It has no comms and is very rewarding to play, I must admit it's a bit hard to get into especially if you have to learn everything yourself.

SIM-2327840 - July 11, 2020, 4:03 am

Looks like you havent played MW2 in 2010-2014, the lobbies made kids grow mustaches and hair on their balls.

What a game?

Joy - July 11, 2020, 4:32 am

I used to play CSGO and there were kids in every lobby who used to swear thinking they were all high and mighty sitting behind their computer screens. Like guys cut me some slack, its my first game.

Haven't played in a while now tho.

Hero - July 11, 2020, 8:15 am

Call of Duty MW2 lobby times were rough as fuck. Never heard so many insults or funny things.

Bacardi Cola Lime - July 11, 2020, 8:17 am

This is part of the experience. You can't actually enjoy gaming without having kids screeching at you.

Skateboard - July 11, 2020, 8:20 am

It can be fun to play video games but I only play HF games.

V?rt - July 11, 2020, 8:23 am

Yeah, some people are so toxic, I don't like it. I do remember being one of those toxic kids back in the day though. But that toxicity was effecting me off the game too. Now when I play games, I try to remain as calm as possible and I find it actually helps me play better. There's just no sense in getting that mad over a video game.

DelTex - July 11, 2020, 8:23 am

Sorry for your sour experience. If you're on console it can be more a process to mute everyone, PC it's easier (depends on the game as well). But it is possible to do.

Sounds like call of duty or something alike? Maybe try picking up calmer games like MMOs or RPGs.

I personally play a lot of CS:GO. There are plenty of toxic players in that game, but it's easy to mute them and if you ever play with them again it keeps them muted unless you unmute them. Generally don't like to mute everyone, but you can very easily do that with "voice_enable 0" or "voice_scale 0" in the console.

There are many easy ways to make your gaming experience about you and less about what others have to say to ruin it.

Sorry your first game back was a surprise to you. Hopefully you can figure something out that will work for you.

If you want to try it again, just turn on console and type in "voice_enable 0" until your comfortable your play style wont attract to many insults (it will always attract some, just the way of all video games). ("voice_enable 1" to turn voices back on)

You obviously misunderstood.

For every retard you mute, 2 more are born.

Exactly, I'll never understand...

Artisan - July 11, 2020, 1:49 pm

People need to understand that a game is just a game and they shouldnt get so hyper over it. I hate these shouting matches too so stay off such games.

Gods Thumb - July 11, 2020, 4:52 pm

It could just be me, but I think that's part of the fun. I love it when people talk a bunch of shit in the pregame lobby and by the end of the game have either left the match or muted their mics. It's the best.
