Thread: Tried to design a film poster. 1-10?

H00L - July 12, 2020, 4:24 pm

Yow, so i made this with the following

Cinema 4d
Forester
Octane Render Photoshop

Dont know but i get slight anime vibes ?

Have a look

It is a cool image, but the text is challenging to read. Does it say Agohy?

Thanks :)

Its meant to say agony :D

i usually blur my text as much as possible because i dont want the focus on the text

That's beautiful, I really like the glitchy scary effect.

Looks alright and cool tbh, but the name of the movie is very unclear. This isn't good for advertising.

You're also missing key information for any movie poster.

Where are the copyrights, the texts, etc...put something to make it look more official and real. Most movie posters have this information, you should look up inspiration when you do work like this or if you're unsure.

E.g.

the image itself is legit. the colors and the vibe are cool. the three pillars of light are rather bright, but I know there's some meaning to it. the overall feel of this is rather nice. there are two things that bother me tho.

it feels a bit.. bright. like the contrast. i can barely make out the details on the tree, and for some reason, i feel that tree is important.

second, the text. i fuck with it, in the sense that it has an "eerie" look to it. its just somewhat hard to see. my suggestion would be, make the white agony just a little more solid. maybe as solid or bright as the 3 bars that go down.. that would kinda make it blend a bit more. leave the ghosty text in the back, just make the white text a bit more visible, a bit more solid.

It looks pretty dope man. If this was more realistic with elements then it would definitely work. Other than that it looks like a dope cover for a horror game or something.

The concept is really neat, but you need to do something about the text. 8/10 :D

ManOvMyWord - July 23, 2020, 7:18 am i think its dope. Its missing all the extra writing like other movie posters have but overall i like it

Tizeel - July 25, 2020, 3:35 am

Looks sick man, keep it up

YoungPriest - July 28, 2020, 2:09 pm

It's a cool idea, but I don't see this working as an actual film poster so for design and idea I would give it a 8/10 and as a movie poster 4/10, still looks great tho!

And this is of course my opinion.

I do not really get Anime vibes, I more get like 80s alien vibe, which is nice, if it is about aliens :D
