We are LIVE!

New interface:

How does Artificial Intelligence make Smart Trade different?

Spoiler (Click to View) Smart Trade is an automated trading bot seeking to bring advanced trading automation technology to the cryptocurrency space. We seek to utilize the high-end technology that exists within traditional financial markets to bring a more reliable and profitable trading experience to cryptocurrency users.

Traditional financial markets have had AI technology, namely dynamic strategy management neural networks, for over a decade, and crypto has not. This is partly the reason that seemingly all cryptocurrency trading bots never seem to produce satisfactory gains for more than a couple months before failing, resulting in massive loss.

These traditional crypto trading bots utilize one or two scripts that operate the same regardless of market conditions. This is an irresponsible and unsophisticated approach to the market, and allows crooks to get away with advertising incredible gains even though their clients eventually lose all of their money.

At Smart Trade, we have developed a risk / strategy management AI engine that reads market conditions based on several key indicators in real time. It makes it's decisions based on confidence levels, and optimizes / selects through dozens of scripts at a time. The bot will then review the results of it's decision to further improve it's confidence in the next decision.

This has proved immensely profitable to our users, and has provided us the ability to consistently and sustainably generate incredible returns for our clients through every market condition. This technology is not available in ANY other public crypto trading bot. We have even maintained profitability through a major market crash (March 2020).

We are seeking to bring this high-end technology to cryptocurrency to create a more reliable and sustainable approach to automated trading.

SmartTrade is designed differently than any other trading bot. You don't need to pay a DIME until you've made money with our platform. You are invoiced at 20% of each week's net profit, meaning you will never pay more than you earn.

Register

This is fully-automated trading, using advanced algorithms written by professionals over years of actual application. We are a legally filed company in Canada bringing proprietary technology into crypto, not a basement project.

This is an institutional-grade financial platform, and never has something like this been offered outside of traditional financial markets and high-end hedge funds. Don't miss out on your chance to be a part of this pioneering service.

How does SmartTrade profit in ANY market condition?

While most positions are closed in profit very quickly, there is the rare market dip that the bot's technical analysis fails to predict. While this would normally result in a losing position, the system reserves a portion of your funds to initiate a strategy called Dollar-Cost-Averaging in order to get out of that tiny position it originally opened. DCA is initiated as the bot's ever-growing market analysis AI engine begins to detect a potential future reversal. Here is an example of DCA in action:

In this case, the bot failed to predict a market dip on this coin, but was still able to build the position after the crash and close it with profit! This is how SmartTrade outperforms other trading bots: We will make YOU money in ANY kind of market.

Click below to see how our strategies performed from Jan 1st, including through the March crash! Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Profit Factor: 9.6x. Net Profit: 854,400%.

How do I set the bot up?

It's very simple. Click on any of the registration links at the top or bottom of this post, and then connect your exchange account with our platform via API (tutorial provided). You then select your trading pair (BTC, USDT, ETH, BNB, or multiple) and set your starting balance. There are many settings you can change to manage your risk level, but we will recommend what we think is best according to your account size.

After each week, you will receive an invoice with that week's fee, the statistics used to calculate that fee, and an address to send the payment to. Remember, your fee is calculated based on that week's net profit, so you will NEVER pay more than you earn.

How are your funds kept safe?

Smart Trade manages your trading through the Binance API.

We do not require withdraw permissions for the bot to function, and we do not hold your API keys on our server. We simply reserve the ability to place trades on your behalf.

Since your funds are out of our control, you can withdraw them at any point on your own accord without consulting us first. You never deposit any money directly to us, except when it comes times to pay your 20% fee.

We have taken drastic security measures to protect our site from potential threats. Penetration testing by a security firm, holding the API keys off-server, and 2-factor-authentication are only small parts of what we do behind the scenes to protect your credentials.

What is the average Return-on-investment (ROI)?

It's hard to say due to the ever-changing cryptocurrency markets. The month of May produced 23.8% returns. It is important to note that since November, there hasn't been a single month in which the bot lost money. We have around 1,300 members in our Discord server, none of which have reported anything other than good results after one month. Each of our strategies have been backtested against two years of market data, with only the best ones being implemented.

Note: We also have a Binance Futures trading bot in open beta that trades on 10x leverage. This has brought in over 25% in just 15 days! Please let us know in private if you're interested in participating in beta.

Can I view the bots activity?

Of course. Once you are registered, you have access to your full trading dashboard, which will display all open and closed positions, total account size, and much more:

So what are you waiting for?

It is recommended to start with 0.1 BTC or $1000 USDT. Though this is recommended, you are more than welcome to test the waters with less funds, though it is highly, highly recommended to start with no less than $200.

The bot can easily profit with amounts lower than the recommended minimum, but it is risky as the bot needs expendable funds in the event of a market crash.

Hi, thanks for your questions ?

1) How much does it cost

There is zero upfront payment. The cost is dependent on how much you make from it. Each week, you are invoiced for 20% of the net profit. For example, you use it for one week and profit $2,000, you will be billed $400. If you only make $100, you will only be billed $20. If you make $10,000, you will be billed $2,000. If you make nothing, you are billed nothing. We only make money when you do.

2) "second i have 15K to invest , how much i will take back in a month ? Its 100%?"

It depends on conditions of the market. In May, the bot did +23.8% on my $20,000 account. If you invested $15,000 and the bot performed the same way it did in May, you would end up with $18,570. The return on investment changes month-by-month based on how markets perform, but we have never had a 30-day period in which the bot did not produce profit. It's safe to assume that the bot will do at the very least around +8%, and at most probably around +50 - 70% monthly (Could be even higher if trading with USDT pairs and BTC has a major bull run).

3) "If yes are you able to give me all the informations i will ask you without get bored of it ?"

I'll answer every question that you need answered! We also have a support team and an active community on Discord that enjoys helping.

4) "Is this autopilot or i must do something else ?"

100% Autopilot. SmartTrade automates your trading with absolutely no control needed from your end.

Yes, it is a confusing process, which is why I made a thread about it. You see, no exchange occurs until one week after the bot is trading for the user. They don't pay us anything, they are only invoiced after the first week for 20% of their net profit. I made a thread asking if I should just contract users for $0 BTC and then provide the site link, but the admin said to just provide them the service and then when it comes times to charge them for their first week to THEN initiate a contract, which we will be doing via the API.

I ran it by a few people because it is a tricky situation to implement all the marketplace rules with, but our present system checks out with what I was told to do ?

And thank you, hope to see you around!

The reason we recommend the upper minimum is to protect the bot's Dollar-Cost-Averaging strategy. The bot reserves a significant portion of your funds for when the market dips, it has various strategies to quickly and easily recover from a loss, but these strategies are dependent upon reserve funds being available.

Also, if you PM me I can send you pages upon pages of off-site reviews, and although those are, of course, less convincing than on-site vouches, they're all we have to work with at this point.

Have been using smart trade for the past few days and so far it looks good. Its only been 5 days and I'm up 3%. If youre not comfortable with this product, start with a smaller amount (I started with 0.03 BTC). Looks pretty promising and there's a pretty good discord community to back it up. You provide the bot with an API key (disable withdraw) and it just manages everything for you. I'll post some more updates on it in the long term.

The difficult part is actually developing the strategies themselves (Some of which have been written over a number of years) rather than putting it all together into a single web application. We hire talented developers for the latter, since the bot needs to switch between strategies in an intelligent way.

This isn't a single man's project essentially, we have talent from several technical backgrounds working together on this. Once you get a team, you'd be surprised what can be built.

Thanks for posting. This is actually very good given the recent market and BTC pairs. BTC pairs trade optimally in a stable market, more so than a short spike in BTC. I made this to illustrate:

So 1% in a few days is actually very good for the recent market conditions. Wait for BTC to stabilize around the range it's currently in and you will really see the bot in action ?

While we have large-scale exchange support, we are only offering Binance at the moment as it is the exchange we feel most comfortable with. We released Smart Trade only a few months ago, and our Binance results have been beyond what anybody (Including us) expected. We don't want to offer, for example, Bitmex support until we have had substantial beta testing there.

Many of you should be having your first week's invoice coming up. We applied a $5 credit to all HF accounts, so some of you will not need to pay, depending on your net profit this week.

IMPORTANT: Remember to mark your contract complete upon paying your first week's fee. Or to start a contract if we do not already have one prior to paying your first fee.

So what happens if the bot loses money in a week? What would the fee be if, say, BTC trading pairs earned $400 but my USDT pairs lost $100 in the same week, then what would the bot charge?

I am beyond impressed with this product so far.

There actually is a refund system (20% refund on the losing amount on weekly net result)!

I'm yet to see any account to take advantage to that, as I we haven't yet had a user at a weekly closed loss. The closest I've seen is someones weekly BTC trades ended in minor loss on the weekly but then that was overshadowed by the profits generated by the USDT trading pair, and this reduced their fee to near nothing even though they ended in profit!

Mainly posting so I can find this thread later, though I have to say; your business model is an ingenious idea. There are so many stockbrokers or auto traders who want the money upfront (which at times is over $500+) with little guarantee for earnings. "This" is how you win over future customers and you can consider me a lifelong member.

Yeah, it doesn't make sense to run it that way. If the broker / bot owner is truly confident in their product, then they should work off profit commission rather than an up-front fee. Only when you make money do we make money.

Also, this pricing structure works just as well for a client managing $500 as it does with a client managing 10 BTC. It's flexible and is the most fair for all parties involved. =)

I appreciate your thoughts!

(Jul 12, 2020 04:43 PM)AIBot Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) As our initial Beta period has gone over well, we've decided to grow our user-base and offer SmartTrade to new communities.

SmartTrade is designed differently than any other trading bot. You don't need to pay a DIME until you've made money with our platform. You are invoiced at 20% of each week's net profit, meaning you will NEVER pay more than you earn.

For those who don't understand, this is 100% autopilot! It is fully-automated trading using advanced algorithms written by professionals over years of actual application. This is an institutional-grade financial platform, and never has something like this been offered before at NO UPFRONT COST!

How does SmartTrade profit in ANY market condition?

While most positions are closed in profit very quickly, there is the rare market dip that the bot's technical analysis fails to predict. While this generally results in a losing position, the system reserves a portion of your funds to initiate a strategy called Dollar-Cost-Averaging in order to get out of that tiny position it originally opened. Here is an example of DCA in action:

In this case, the bot failed to predict a market dip on this coin, but was still able to build the position after the crash and close it with profit! This is how SmartTrade outperforms other trading bots: We will make YOU money in ANY kind of market.

How do I set the bot up?

It's very simple. Click on any of the registration links at the top or bottom of this post, and then connect your exchange account with our platform via API (tutorial provided). You then select your trading pair (BTC, USDT, ETH, BNB, or multiple) and set your starting balance. There are many settings you can change to manage your risk level, but we will recommend what we think is best according to your account size. After each week, you will receive an email with that week's fee, the statistics used to calculate that fee, and an address to send the payment to. Remember, your fee is calculated based on that week's net profit, so you will NEVER pay more than you earn.

What is the average Return-on-investment (ROI)?

It's hard to say due to the ever-changing cryptocurrency markets. The month of May produced 23.8% returns. It is important to note that since November, there hasn't been a single month in which the bot lost money. We have around 900 members in our Discord server, none of which have reported anything other than good results after one month. Each of our strategies have been backtested against two years of market data, with only the best ones being implemented.

Can I view the bots activity?

Of course. Once you are registered, you have access to your full trading dashboard, which will display all open and closed positions, total account size, and much more:

(Jul 29, 2020 11:33 PM)King 69 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What is the lowest amount that your bot can trade?

We recommend a balance of $1000 USDT or 0.1 BTC to allow the bot to reserve a sizeable amount of funds to use our Dollar-Cost-Averaging strategy in the event of a market dip, however we are open to allowing users to start a $200 account with us in order to "test the waters".

We also offer paper trading, which is trading with fake money to see how the bot performs over time.

In short, there is no enforced minimum, however we highly recommend a minimum of $1k if you'd like to secure your gains for the long term.

You're more than free to shoot me a PM if you have any specific questions. I honestly prefer crypto to FOREX (At least in the current climate) partially because FOREX seems to almost require high leverage to make any worthwhile gains (Unless trading with a very large account), introducing the risk of liquidation whereas crypto spot markets have a perfect blend of maturity and volatility, allowing you to really capitalize on high-volume trading strategies without the risk of your account going to zero.

It's actually incredibly simple, though perhaps I make it out to be more complicated than it is. ?

You will need a Binance.com account (Not Binance.us, if you are in the US you can just use a VPN or VPS) and some crypto to trade with as a homepair, such as Bitcoin or USDT. Binance provides you with "API Codes" which can be copied and pasted into your account on our website. These API codes allow us to manage trading on your behalf, but does not allow us to withdraw your money (We don't need withdraw permissions anyways).

We have a pretty detailed setup guide in our server, but it is a simple process nonetheless. We designed this to be beginner-friendly as we are aiming to build an institutional-grade financial platform suitable for all levels of experience. If you have more specific questions then feel free to shoot me a PM, and if you want to get started then go ahead and start a contract so I can send you all the setup information.

Thanks!

Thanks for clearing out my doubts. I'll look into Binance API just to remove seed of skepticism left within me.. XD...

You recommend minimum $1K but I was thinking to use a quarter of it only and see how things go, post that I'll deposit more...

Also I recommend you to editing the original post and add few FAQs there itself.

Edit:

So I looked into the official docs of Binance exchange REST API. Apparently we need to create an API key from our Binance account "API Management" section. We can then allow various level of permissions like: "Enable Trading", "Enable Withdrawals". API access can be restricted to specific trusted IPs as well.

Hey, thank you for the suggestions. If you wouldn't mind, could you send me some of the questions that you originally had? Thanks.

Regarding our minimum, it is to ensure that trading is effective and optimal on your account, not to maximize our personal profits or boost our client's account sizes. The bot reserves up to 70% of your funds to Dollar-Cost-Average losing positions, and it only does so effectively and safely WITH that significant reserve. Even with a $10,000 account, positions are unlikely to exceed $66, as we utilize high-frequency trading and spread your funds out efficiently.

I hope this answers your comment regarding the minimum. =)

No, it was explained to me that that is the case with market arbitrage, but this is not a market making bot, it is a high-volume trading trading bot. There are not inefficiencies being exploited in the market but actual price changes over time.

For high usage to affect profitability the bot would have to be managing billions of dollars.

User above hit the nail on the head, this is not an arbitrage bot. It does not capitalize off of market inefficiencies, which are severely limited to exploitation. Additionally, our bot utilizes High-Frequency strategies, opening up to 200 positions at one time. This spreads capital over a wide range, and in conjunction with Binance's high volume, does not dramatically effect the market unless being collectively used with billions of USD.

Regarding your country-lock question, most of our American users bypass this simply by using a VPN or VPS. Binance does not require KYC on foreign users.

so how do you ensure users who make money don't run away?

i'm concerned as with API keys, surely you can't withdraw the funds if we configur eit correctly, but what's to prevent you from one day use our fund to e.g pump some shit coins and you sell your load ?

also did a quick whois but all info are anonymous.. if you're a business then you shouldn't need to hide them?

If you're on the fence, you'll just have to stick around and see. We are legally registering ourselves in Canada (Our head admin lives there) and will be posting all information regarding that when it happens. Also, we make significant passive income ourselves as our user's accounts grow, so there really is no reason to throw all of that away.

Regarding users who may run away with our honesty-based system, I am not concerned at all. If the time comes around to pay the fee on the profit and there are still open positions, the last thing the user would want to do is disable the bot by not honoring the agreement. We have had a couple small accounts do this, and I'm not the least bit concerned as each of our significant clients have paid their fees diligently as they see the results that we bring them.

I'm interested, how are you managing your downside risk? DCA only works in periods of high volatility with a sustained general uptrend and even then you make assumptions about implied volatility. I can see from the trading logs you're following a stepwise gain, what are you stopping your losses at?

Hi - None taken.

You never deposit any of your trading funds with us, you connect your exchange account via API, and we are very adamant when we say to disable withdraw permissions. It's not possible for us to withdraw your funds, only send trade orders to your exchange.

We are already managing over $1.1M in collective accounts and generating what we need from the 20% fee on profits. We have no desire to harm anybody. We're in it for the long run.

(Aug 6, 2020 06:12 AM)AlBot Wrote: CITE Hey, thank you for the suggestions. If you wouldn't mind, could you send me some of the questions that you originally had? Thanks.

Regarding our minimum, it is to ensure that trading is effective and optimal on your account, not to maximize our personal profits or boost our client's account sizes. The bot reserves up to 70% of your funds to Dollar-Cost-Average losing positions, and it only does so effectively and safely WITH that significant reserve. Even with a $10,000 account, positions are unlikely to exceed $66, as we utilize high-frequency trading and spread your funds out efficiently.

I hope this answers your comment regarding the minimum. =)

Thanks for clearing out my doubts.

I've curated a list of questions that you can answer and add in your main post, some more questions popped up and others have already been asked.

Since when has this service been live?

Is this autopilot or semi autopilot?

What's the minimum amount required?

What's the recommended amount?

What's the fee for using this service?

Where do I need to deposit my amount to trading?

What is the average profit or loss per week or month till now?

What is the payment mode of fees?

Do you offer paper trading?

Can we add extra funds as fees to avoid fees being missed?

What all API permissions will be needed from the exchange platform for this to work?

What happens if there's loss?

How bot avoids loss?

How bot performs or manages a market crash?

What all exchange services are support?

Is this limited to cryptocurrency trading only?

Can the trade settings be modified?

How do I divide my funds for more than one pair, like I want to trade BTC/USDT and BTC/ETH can I divide my fund by ratio, fixed amount or it is chosen by the bot?

I'm just made my deposit waiting for my account to be activated, will update with a review in a week and then another review in 2 months.

Let's see where this goes

Hollow™ - August 7, 2020, 7:49 am

I've started this 2 days ago, invested in around 15k (it's split apart). So far today is my 3rd day and I'm getting around averaging 1% return a day. There doesn't seem to be any risk besides the bot losing your port (not likely to happen as so far the trade win rate ratio is around 99%). I will most likely invest more after a month of monitoring, but so far so good!

Great question! Thanks for asking.

Firstly, DCA is applied not at a specific level but when a reversal is detected by our trading engine, which relies not on static algorithms but is managed by our AI that crosschecks with many back tested reference and Real-time indicators. It will then review the results of it's decision in order to improve confidence in predicting the next movement correctly.

In the same way, it doesn't enter a trade when the market is in a sustained downtrend. Stop-loss levels are determined both by the AIs perceived strength in the market as well as the confidence in the assessment of said strength.

I hope this answers your question.

Trading with an account that small is underfunding your account, so no. We have an absolute minimum of $500 and a recommended minimum of $1k. This isn't to boost our personal profits but to ensure the efficiency and safety of our clients' accounts. High-Frequency-Trading strategies, like ours, will spread your funds over up to 200 positions at a time. Additionally, up to 70% of your funds are reserved at a time in order to dollar-cost-average potential reversals on losing positions.

If you are trading with only $100, that leaves only $30 to be opened into new positions, and the position size would have to be so minimal that binance trading fees would greatly hurt profitability.

Hi, thanks for the questions!

"What percentage of +- can we expect? Nothing is perfect, the crypto market is highly volatile. Suppose I have $500, with the applied +- percentage how much can I earn in a month? (Just an estimate I won't take your word)"

You're right, nothing is perfect and markets are volatile. With our recommended settings, a $500 account will return 12 - 25% in spot markets with the USDT or BTC trading pair. Our futures bot can easily average 1% a day over the course of a month since it trades both directions, long and short.

I'd like to provide a more closed-ranged estimate, but as you said, markets are volatile. I can say with confidence that those returns will be held through a downtrending market, as our backtesting results have proved. We can actually provide much higher returns with our bot, potentially exceeding 50 -100% a month, however that would come with irresponsible risk, and we are willing to settle for lower returns if that means they can be sustained consistently.

We are a long-term investment tool, not a money printing machine. We are honest about our returns, and this can be verified by our community and several users on this forum. Our risk management engine tailors our clients' trading to match market conditions as best as possible, and this is a feature that no public crypto trading bots have. In fact, this tech is more common in big name wall street hedge funds.

Our trading engine does not operate like other trading bots in that it does not use a couple static and unchanging strategies that may only produce satisfactory results in very specific market conditions - It is an AI neural network that sorts through dozens of strategies, tweaks them according to market conditions, and applies them selectively. I'd love to have a call with you on Discord so that I can go further in depth about this, as it's a lot to get across over text, lol.

"I am very interested in your Bot, I have some BTC lying around. But one thing that bothers me is I read that some of the users had losses, yet you still claim there were no losses."

Let me be clear about this - No user has closed a week at a net realized loss. There are open positions that may dip into the red, but they are eventually closed in profit. Our spot market bot has a 95%+ win rate on trades. Our futures bot is even higher, at 97%+ win rate.

When the markets dip, open positions will inevitably suffer, that is unavoidable. However, we reserve a majority of your funds for dollar-cost-averaging losing positions when a potential reversal is detected, and these positions will almost certainly close in profit. If a position is doomed (Coin plummets by a large % randomly), then a stop-loss is hit and the position is then closed at a loss. It's worthwhile to keep in mind that position sizes are tiny, often less than 1% of total account size, so a 4% loss on a $5 position is minimal anyways.

Our bot is very effective at sorting through potential trades and identifying the ones that are most likely to succeed, and it is also highly efficient in fixing a bad decision, hence our wonderful win rate.

I hope this serves to clear things up, thank you for asking!

"What percentage of +- can we expect? Nothing is perfect, the crypto market is highly volatile. Suppose I have $500, with the applied +- percentage how much can I earn in a month? (Just an estimate I won't take your word)"

You're right, nothing is perfect and markets are volatile. With our recommended settings, a $500 account will return 12 - 25% in spot markets with the USDT or BTC trading pair. Our futures bot can easily average 1% a day over the course of a month since it trades both directions, long and short.

I'd like to provide a more closed-ranged estimate, but as you said, markets are volatile. I can say with confidence that those returns will be held through a downtrending market, as our backtesting results have proved. We can actually provide much higher returns with our bot, potentially exceeding 50 -100% a month, however that would come with irresponsible risk, and we are willing to settle for lower returns if that means they can be sustained consistently.

We are a long-term investment tool, not a money printing machine. We are honest about our returns, and this can be verified by our community and several users on this forum. Our risk management engine tailors our clients' trading to match market conditions as best as possible, and this is a feature that no public crypto trading bots have. In fact, this tech is more common in big name wall street hedge funds.

Our trading engine does not operate like other trading bots in that it does not use a couple static and unchanging strategies that may only produce satisfactory results in very specific market conditions - It is an AI neural network that sorts through dozens of strategies, tweaks them according to market conditions, and applies them selectively. I'd love to have a call with you on Discord so that I can go further in depth about this, as it's a lot to get across over text, lol.

"I am very interested in your Bot, I have some BTC lying around. But one thing that bothers me is I read that some of the users had losses, yet you still claim there were no losses."

Let me be clear about this - No user has closed a week at a net realized loss. There are open positions that may dip into the red, but they are eventually closed in profit. Our spot market bot has a 95%+ win rate on trades. Our futures bot is even higher, at 97%+ win rate.

When the markets dip, open positions will inevitably suffer, that is unavoidable. However, we reserve a majority of your funds for dollar-cost-averaging losing positions when a potential reversal is detected, and these positions will almost certainly close in profit. If a position is doomed (Coin plummets by a large % randomly), then a stop-loss is hit and the position is then closed at a loss. It's worthwhile to keep in mind that position sizes are tiny, often less than 1% of total account size, so a 4% loss on a $5 position is minimal anyways.

Our bot is very effective at sorting through potential trades and identifying the ones that are most likely to succeed, and it is also highly efficient in fixing a bad decision, hence our wonderful win rate.

I am interested into trying this bot out with 1000$ as per your recommendation. However, I'm a total newbie when it comes with crypto trading. I just exchange crypto with a guy who does BTC->Cash. This Binance.com website, I need to get an account there first right?

And does your bot come with a ReadMe.txt as to where I need to get the API from, where to put it, which settings to touch and whatnot...

Thanks for your reply, and one more question:

If I invest 1000$, in 30 days how much profit am I looking at, both in percentage and in hard cash?

Thank you a lot.

Hey, thanks for the questions!

"And does your bot come with a ReadMe.txt as to where I need to get the API from, where to put it, which settings to touch and whatnot..."

We designed the bot to be entirely beginner friendly and hands-off as possible. We have a detailed setup guide as to getting started (It's not difficult) as well as a very active and helpful community + support team. Don't worry about lack of expertise, we designed this to meet the needs of both the experienced and inexperienced ?.

"However, I'm a total newbie when it comes with crypto trading. I just exchange crypto with a guy who does BTC->Cash. This Binance.com website, I need to get an account there first right?"

You should create a Binance.com (Not Binance.us) account and fund it with cryptocurrency, be it BTC, USDT, ETH, or BNB. Any one of those four is fine. If you're a US citizen ensure you use Binance on a foreign VPN, the SEC doesn't like Binance. I'm personally American and just use a VPN.

Sorry forgot to respond to that one

Our spot bot is returning between 12 - 25% a month. The cash profit of that depends on your trading pair.

If using BTC, it's hard to tell because you also have to account for the value fluctuations of bitcoin itself.

We also offer the USDT trading pair. USDT is a coin that is tied to the value of the US dollar. It is constantly at $1. If you trade with USDT, you can expect 12 - 25% monthly, meaning $120 - $250 a month.

If you let your profits sit in the bot, it has more funds to trade with, and will compound your returns. Let's be conservative and assume a 12% (minimum) monthly return on a $1,000 account. Let's calculate a 12% monthly return, continuously compounding:

Month 1: $1,120
Month 2: $1,254
Month 3: $1,404
Month 4: $1,573
Month 5: $1,762
Month 6: $1,973.

If we were to use the more likely average monthly return of 18.5%, by month 6 your account would be worth $2,768.

Our futures bot (Which trades on 10x leverage with smaller position size) is producing around 0.8 - 1.2% a day, compounding to an average of 35% monthly. The results I quoted are on the safest, most minimal end, and will more than likely exceed those.

Well that depends on many factors. Which trading pair, account size, futures/spot etc, there's no way to give a blanket statement such as "Our users made 2% today" because no single user has identical trading history with our bot.

(Aug 30, 2020 05:40 AM)VarNull Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How long has your service been running? Have you always been using similar algorithms for your trade i.e can we expect consistency?What was the biggest loss?

We've been in development over a year but public since late April. As explained in the original post, our algorithms are constantly changing as we are using a neural network AI engine that scans market data using several key indicators and making decisions based on confidence intervals. These confidence intervals are constructed by analyzing its past decisions and growing a better understanding of which strategies work best in specific situations, best sl-tp levels is a particular pattern, etc. It's not constructed like a traditional, basic trading bot that operates the same regardless of market conditions. This technology is comparable to what you find in wall street hedge funds, not crypto.

To answer your question, yes you can expect consistency. We can easily turn position size and leverage up and achieve over 200% a month like some magicians offer. The problem with this is that it always leads to all customer accounts being liquidated to $0. We have designed this as a long-term investment platform, not a get rich quick scheme. Your returns will be consistent along those lines.

The biggest loss was when our server experienced issues leading market data to be sent to us late. An 18% loss was incurred on a very small trade, leading to around a $2 loss on a trade.

Losses are very minimal, we keep drawdown below 8% at all times. Bot can open over 200 positions at one time, so if one trade has a big loss, it's literally pennies gone.

Good questions.

1. Yes, we need your API key.
2. Yes, if you mean the ability to send trading commands. We do not have the ability to withdraw your funds, nor does Binance allow us to sell buy orders for more than 5% of the market value of a coin nor can place sell orders for more than 5% less than market value.
3. Yes. You can set your starting balance on Smart Trade. We recommend having a Binance account just for the bot, as manual trading on the same account can mess up our accounting.

Great question, and I'm glad you asked.

Zero accounts came remotely close to liquidation. Minor losses, and some gains. Of course there were some losses, but nothing serious by any means. We've encountered worse (March crash to $3k levels, last years fake bull run) and came out in profit. Funny enough, I welcome the crash, as our bot has historically closed it's most profitable trades by dollar-cost-averaging the dips. Our futures bot returned, on average, 3% today in it's calculated shorts.

Unsure if you saw my reply to his thread last month, but I called it and knew that his clients would be liquidated. I tried to warn several people against it.

If you review my original post on this thread, you can see that we designed this product in response to the growing problem of misleading "funds" exactly like M249s. We are bringing technology which is generally found in developed traditional markets into the world of cryptocurrency, and we are looking to provide an actual long-term solution, not a get-rich-quick gambling solution.

We can easily turn up leverage and position size to obtain 200 - 400% monthly returns, but that would be irresponsible and does not line up with our long-term goals. We favor long-term returns over flashy money printing. If you want to double your money tonight and lose it all tomorrow, then we aren't for you. However, if you're looking for above-average returns that will continue to grow into the foreseeable future, we're here for you and welcome you.

Edit: We are going to be providing free trading for users who were liquidated by M249s fund.

Now is a great time to jump in, pick up some cheap coin.

However, we do have an absolute minimum of $500 and a recommended minimum of $1,000 as it compliments our high-frequency strategies and helps us support the risk triangle.

(Sep 5, 2020 02:52 AM)Geralt Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What was the average ROI on the months of July and August?

It's difficult to provide a blanket statement such as "This was the ROI of our bot" as no two users have identical trading. However, spot markets performed below average through July, with average returns being around 10 - 21% (Whereas average returns are generally 12 - 25% monthly) for our users depending on their trading pair and entry time / capital. Despite this, user balance in terms of USD soared far beyond expectations as their overall account value appreciated with bitcoin.

During the month of July, our futures program was in open Beta, so we had limited participation and were still forward testing with different settings. On the launch of the program, we saw 25% returns in the first 2 weeks, but we quickly changed the strategies as it was going far beyond our desired risk tolerance. After making changes, we've been seeing 0.8 - 1.2% daily returns on our futures bot, with outliers in both directions. 0.8 - 1.2 daily is the measured average through August as well.

Golden Complex - September 5, 2020, 7:33 pm

I often talk about the sustainability of our bot's returns through any market condition. While other bots are being liquidated and sustaining unbelievable losses, we are getting by just fine. Many of our users are even profiting through this horrendous crash.

This user gained over $100 overnight on a $1,000 account through our shorts during this crash:

Dr_RezfanFutyulo - September 7, 2020, 12:26 am

Highly interested.

Supposing I start with the minimum, 200$, what kind of earnings would I see in 1-3 months?

Is it possible to just leave it, forget about it and check back monthly, meaning is payment to you guys taken automatically?

What if there's a significant loss, then profit is made up to the point of the original investment? In that case do I owe you money? -> supposing I start with 200$, lose 100$ then get the 100$ back, which is profit due to your bot, would I owe you a % of that then?

Thanks in advance!

Hi, thanks for the questions.

As the user above said, we've raised our minimum to $500. The $200 minimum was temporary and just so users could test our service before depositing more. Since we've gained enough vouches and credibility, we no longer need to offer this.

Your second question is an important one, and the answer is no, you wouldn't owe any money in that case. We have a refund system in place for losses whereby we credit your account with balance if a loss is realized. You'll only pay us when in realized gain!

Sounds good! We also offer discounted fees for larger accounts. Several of our members are enjoying a 10% commission (as opposed to 20%) on their account since it is over $100K, and 15% commissions for accounts over $50k.

What kind of logging do you do through this service? Large numbers of frequent day trades make tax reporting a nightmare (for those who are declaring this on their taxes :D). Do you have reporting/logs that allow me to look back (I will most likely create a parser) and calculate the buy/sell prices for loss/capital gain calculations? Maybe this is done on binance but I was interested in your side as well.

Every single individual trade is tracked and displayed within your personal Smart Trade account dashboard, and can be easily accessed. We track every detail such as Opening date, entry price, position size, DCA levels used, closing date, closing price, net profit / net profit %, trading pair, duration of trade, Binance fees, etc. It's all tracked and easily accessible to you!

Update

For those interested in very long-term investment with particularly large accounts, we are exploring the results of a more conservative strategy that is lower-risk and lower-return, but more stable.

Our traditional settings are already built to handle any market condition, and our performance through this latest crash has put our ability to sustain profits in full view. This new trading engine will build even further upon that.

Here are the results of 16 weeks with this trading style:

During account setup, users will be given a box-tick choice as to whether they wish the bot to trade with our traditional or new conservative trading styles.

We cannot withdraw funds from your Binance balance as we require you to disable API withdraw permissions for security reasons.

On your Smart Trade account dashboard, you have an invoice section which calculates your fee and provides an automated way to pay it through any major crypto of your choice. You can prepay any amount and the fee will be automatically deducted from your on-site balance. Alternatively, you can just pay at the end of every week.

We have long term goals with this service. We are a legally registered company with detailed plans over the next several years. Soon enough we will be moving to more mainstream marketing channels, HF is only a way to jumpstart our business.

A Smart Trade account is meant to provide long-term returns even over a period of several years, and we don't plan on stopping anytime soon. No urgency, whenever you feel ready, we will be around.

We only charge when you earn.

Yeah.

Not to throw any shade, but this seems too good to be true.

Just wondering why you would be able to create something like this and use it like this, throwing it on HF.

My instincts say that there should be plenty other business opportunities with this.

I thought about this too, but if you scan through the whole thread, there seem to be zero complaints with this service, suggesting that this is legit. Maybe the profit each months isn't a fixed number like 20 - 23%, there could be some bad months like 5 - 10%, but according to OP, there has never been a month where the bot go negative.

This is correct. Recovery from this last crash has been going well, but is relatively stagnant when compared to previous months. We are still aiming at solid returns this month, but we are more than likely going to fall short of our usual high-profit targets.

There are a couple users who decided to trade exclusively in the long direction who also chose to exit as soon as the market crashed, and they experienced minor losses (In the single-digit %) only because they exited as soon as their open positions took a hit which we highly suggested against. Those who are allowing the bot to do it's job are seeing drawdown reduce quickly, outpacing the market quickly. Some of our users even experienced record returns during the crash due to thriving short positions.

This is a valid concern, and was an issue I raised when somebody suggested I offer this service here. He explained to me that this forum is a computer-enthusiast, crypto-friendly forum and a registered company in the US with an owner that has a public identity, so that changed my mind. This was not the first place we sold this. We begun on Discord, and we also have a Bitcointalk thread. Besides that, we have other reasons for promoting here:

While we have put a lot of our personal funds into the development of Smart Trade, we are still a bootstrap company. We will be seeking Angel Investment in the near future, but in order to pursue this we need credibility and large-scale results. We are simply exploring every opportunity we can, and thus far this platform has been of great benefit in growing our userbase. Some of our largest clients actually come from here, though I will not name them.

My point is that HF is not remotely an end-all for our marketing plan. Rather, I wouldn't necessarily say we've even begun it. As we release a full production product in the future (We will be offering FOREX, much more wide-scale exchange support, a more advanced UI, etc) then we will look into more expensive and "mainstream" marketing channels.

I've been using this bot for around a month now. I trade Futures exclusively, with an allocation of around 2:1 for Long and Short. Sadly got hit a bit by the BTC crash, but the bot handled it well unlike other bots *cough*M249*cough*, some stop losses were hit and if I had instead allocated the same amount in Shorts and Longs I would have went out with a good profit, when these stop losses were hit my Shorts still made up for that loss though so through the crash no money was lost. I've seen others whose futures profited massively in the time of the crash, depending on their entry time and allocation.

Before and after the crash the bot has been making pretty consistent profits, I wouldn't say its in the area of 23.8% a month but from my experience so far 10-15% is definitely doable, all depending on market conditions.

I can't speak for how well Spot trading performs.

One negative point however is the website, in the last weeks it has been very buggy. This isn't the end of the world cause it's only used to setup your bot initially, pay fees and see stats, as it isn't directly linked to the bot that does trades. From what Ive heard they are not charging fees until some of the bigger issues are fixed which is also good.

Overall though, my experience has been very positive and the returns have also been nice, can recommend.

I appreciate you taking the time to write a review. Yes, we are falling short of our 25%/monthly targets on spot markets due to the crazy volatility in recent months, however we are still coming out in profit. Those with shorts are doing phenomenal, as you said.

Some users are doing better than 25%/month on their short accounts, however that is about all.

Only req is to have a Binance.com account which does not require KYC of any kind. Our minimum investment is $500 and recommended is $1k. Average investment is around $3 - 10k.

How has the bot been performing up until now, month by month?

Which trading pair, spot/futures and BTC, USDT, ETH or BNB homepair?

Performance is dependent on trading pair, entry time, account settings, etc.

No two accounts have the exact same trades.

In you OP you have this statement:

May 1st - May 31st results 23.8% gains

So was just looking for the same numbers for june, july, august, september

On USDT Spot trading pairs, June - August provided strong returns for many, averaging between 8 - 20%. We were slightly lower as we went down for a couple weeks, working on critical security updates.

In September, there was drawdown for many, but those using the bot for over 1 month are still far in the green. This is to be expected as a major market crash occurred. We are seeing drawdown continue to fall.

Futures is producing above-average returns.

I'm Stanley HF's helper bot. This OP (original poster) of this thread wants everyone to see this page and has elected to bump it to the top of the showthread listing. Since HF doesn't want a ton of LQP (Low Quality Posts) this is the best method of bumping your content. There is a small ?yte fee for each bump. Any OP can bump any of their threads on HF from the linked icon on the top of their first post.

If you haven't already read the first post of this thread we encourage you to do so.

Thanks,
Stanley
