Thread: Is it wrong to blackmail a pedophile?

Roberto Scorpius Malfoy - July 13, 2020, 10:48 am

So this is an interesting topic, I would like to hear peoples opinion regarding this.

Let's say that you hunt pedophiles through the internet and you manage to get their PC infected and you can see that they are talking to kids and doing nasty stuff. Would you be okay if someone blackmailed them and made them pay like 5 grands and then report them to the police?

Dredd - July 13, 2020, 10:49 am

Yeah bro that's wrong, just report them exploiting them only brings you down to their level.

(Jul 13, 2020 10:49 AM)Dredd Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah bro that's wrong, just report them exploiting them only brings you down to their level.

Don't get me wrong, I am not doing those kinds of stuff at the moment, I just want to hear peoples opinions about this. I don't have time to hunt pedophiles haha.

SIM-3587630 - July 13, 2020, 10:52 am

The only thing I'd want for a dirty pedo is to rot in jail for life. About the money part, I won't really like having money that he probably made off selling pedo videos or whatever. I know that it sounds pretty dumb and non-sense, but that's what I think. Anyway, if you want to black mail him, go ahead.

LoveOverFear - July 13, 2020, 10:52 am

Yeah its bad, as the first guy that wrote here, you putting yourself on their level, just report them.

Nate - July 13, 2020, 10:53 am

Meh, you do bad karma you get it coming back to you.

Fuck that pedo expose his shit my man

December - July 13, 2020, 10:56 am

Its just better to report them to the police and blackmail them so they cant spend more money into buying CP

Bastille - July 13, 2020, 11:01 am

I would be okay, I'll would also be okay too if I was the hacker.

However, in many countries (not to say all countries), hacking is illegal if the person you hack is not aware and did not expressly gave his agreement for that.

Instead of having 1 pedophile in jail, you'll have 1 pedophile and 1 guy who tried to make this world a better place ?

DeITex - July 13, 2020, 11:04 am

I personally would not want to make money off of the threat of exposing someone for exploiting children (thus myself indirectly making money off the exploitation of the children). Neither am I in the legal position to pass down such judgment on someone like this. It'd probably be best to figure out how to anonymously report the individual to the correct authorities.

On a side note... Would you mind giving a brief summary of what CS:GO arena is? ?

luke - July 13, 2020, 11:06 am

Yes, this would be immoral.

SIM-1349466 - July 13, 2020, 11:06 am

For starters, I don't feel bad for pedophiles...at all. Secondly, you weren't specific on payment so, would you really want someone like that to send you money electronically, knowing they may be searched? I wouldn't.

?Dødggygeez - July 13, 2020, 11:09 am

Greed is a natural human instinct. First thing is first, they need to be reported/exposed, especially if they have the potential of causing harm to the vulnerable. However, take money from them by all means, but bankrupting them, destroying their lives and furthermore, exposing them! Now that... That means you are using your moral compass to justify your wrong doings.

Take what they can afford to lose and then expose, or just expose. I couldn't personally rinse them and expose them and make them hated by society for something they can not control.

Fudster - July 13, 2020, 11:11 am

Blackmail is illegal.

Doesn't matter if the guy is a pedo or not. You can get in trouble for blackmail.

Well said, this is exactly what I was thinking. You can be linked to a pedo. Not bueno

James Burnham - July 13, 2020, 11:16 am

I was wondering about that too, and after googling about it I found a few LE articles advising against it because if there is an ongoing investigation on someone and you blackmail him you may push him to erase all proof that could get him convicted.

Free Kurdistan - July 13, 2020, 11:22 am

I wouldn't fight wrong with wrong, I'd rather report them with all the proof and make sure they get locked the fuck up.

popZmoke - July 13, 2020, 1:12 pm

99% chance the police won't pick this shit up, so yes I would 1000000% blackmail them.

Edit:

Imagine it's an old grandpa, o boy I be drooling on my keyboard. Atleast 5-10k

Maxie - July 13, 2020, 1:15 pm

Honestly, I don't think it would be immoral per say. However, it's putting you at a risk. The police is definitely doing a thorough search of his seized computer.

V?rt - July 13, 2020, 2:07 pm

I'd pass on the payment. Knowing that you may have saved a kid or a few kid's lives would be payment enough. Plus like others mentioned, it wouldn't be cool to be linked backed to them.

Angela White - July 13, 2020, 2:09 pm

Legally, yes, it is wrong to blackmail someone.

But if it's a pedophile I'd lift all my restrictions and morals.

TOM - July 13, 2020, 2:15 pm

Blackmailing someone is illegal , So doing so may get you in trouble

Mr. Tycoon - July 13, 2020, 2:15 pm

Here's my outlook...

So, my partner who is on the spectrum of Autism began being very much distant from me this year, she threw me out a few times and we had issues with feelings. It came to a point where she would go from telling me every day that she loved me, to not even sleeping in the same room as me. We lost complete intimacy with each other, no touch at all - although it is expected with somebody who suffers from such thing, I began feeling it was a personal issue towards me, I got it into my head she stopped loving me.

I sat with her mum and I poured my heart out to her - I know some mother's don't want to hear that her daughter is struggling, and I even thought maybe she would come over as defensive as I was talking 'about' her daughter TO her. However, she sat with me and told me that my partner had a bad time growing up and began to tell me the gutt-wrenching experiences she had. Without going into details, because I don't want to trigger anyone's emotions if they've had previous or are experiencing such things, but she told me on occasions where people would use my girlfriends 'lack of understanding' to gain sex. Her mum told me that 'theatrically' if she were to write down dates of when this happened, in a notebook, there wouldn't be enough space on a single page.

My partner was raped countless times, then only to find out there is a 'backlog' of people trying to prey on her currently - one of which was a soldier that had a wife and children, kept sending her horrible messages and so I had to send him a message. In summary, I told him I knew what he had said, that he was Sgt in the Army, that he has wife and kids. At first, he denied it, told me he was a contracted killer and he would find me - I then told him 'sure, but you need to understand you've not only threatened me, but you've attempted to exploit a vulnerable girl' I told him that I would contact the police, and the army as he had listed his unit on FB. He spent the next five minutes saying that 'he wasn't really a contracted killer' and that 'it would ruin his career' and that I was 'blackmailing' him by involving his family.

Sure - I was blackmailing him, but the risk outweighed my moral standards and I felt that the pain my partner had gone through, outweighed his risk.

Moral of the story is, the pain they bring, out-weighs any moral standards and it's pro-active to stop them. However there must always be a fine line between 'hunting' these people like some 'sting' operations done by the public, and protective duties to protect loved ones in an 'instanced' matter.

StickTalk - July 13, 2020, 2:33 pm

How would you report them? You'd tell the police, and they'd ask if you have any evidence, and then what? You say that you infected their PC with a RAT? Lmao.

Enervant - July 13, 2020, 2:54 pm

hiding evidence is illegal in some places

accessing a system without consent it's also illegal but you could also make some anonymous complain

blackmailing just makes it worse

Artisan - July 13, 2020, 3:12 pm

I wouldnt mind if you extorted the guy coz got no soft corners for pedos but what if you took time to set it up and that guy molests a kid in that time span. Wouldnt that be on your conscience? Reporting the guy first is the best choice in my opinion.

Zee - July 13, 2020, 3:33 pm

You show up at their house and tell them the deal or stfu and mind your own business and let the police do their job. Plus you'd be admitting that you hacked another mans computer, and most likely that you saw the pic and vids yourself, so what better does it make yourself.

Almonds - July 13, 2020, 3:53 pm

No, just report him and be done.

That is enough -

Vitello - July 13, 2020, 4:05 pm

I could not care less about a pedophile. You could kill him and I would still not care. Just remember that you can be prosecuted, so if you have a lot to lose, then no, then it's not worth it. Then it's probably better to let him rot in a prison, and as far as I know, pedophiles are not treated very well in prison.

Prox - July 13, 2020, 4:06 pm

Wouldn't taking advantage of someone doing something morally wrong without reporting it make you semi-responsible for whatever they are doing?

Legality aside, say you do get the $5k and don't report, you are allowing that person to continue which falls directly on your shoulders.

Accord - July 14, 2020, 7:24 am

Just report em directly to the authorities if youre really concerned about the guy being pedo

Et3rnal - July 14, 2020, 9:07 am

I have blackmailed pedophiles before. Multiple. Using a RAT I was able to gain access and view their webcams, and blackmail them. I sent them my bank details they sent me money. EASY and it's my proudest work as of yet! Thanks

Popstar - July 14, 2020, 9:09 am

the people who ~DESERVE~ anything bad to happen to them:

rapists
pedophiles murderers

to me, these are the 3 lines you do not absolutely cross.

crixus - July 14, 2020, 9:34 am

If you blackmail someone you must follow up your deal and don't involve the police.
You give your words to a person it doesn't matter if it's pedophile.
It remind me this nasty movie actors in movies who can never stand their word.

Patriot - July 14, 2020, 9:52 am

I wouldn't do such a thing. I would just report right away and make sure the law gets involved.

hyperionthegod - July 14, 2020, 9:54 am you can blackmail him AND report him to the police. why wouldn't that be possible lol. I don't think anyone is going to show their id or face before/after blackmailing someone. Just make sure you remain anonymous.

rsx - July 14, 2020, 9:55 am

I wouldn't risk getting myself in trouble over trying to blackmail some pedo

Blockonome - July 14, 2020, 12:47 pm

Never blackmailed a pedo before, straight up scared the shit out of them and reported them. However, I have blackmailed regular dudes before, which has worked beautifully.

Swip3r - July 14, 2020, 12:54 pm depends on your morale reasoning, just know when you associate with illegal activities you're just as bad in most eyes of the law regardless of your motives.

I like how the judge, jury and executioner says that it's wrong to essentially execute paedophiles. In essence it says a hell of a lot about your moral compass and how properly aligned it is. In fact, I agree with our "executioner".

Why would you, or anyone for that matter, be above a suspected paedophile? The big word here is "suspected", because for all you know, you've just hacked the computer of a person who is actually a paedophile hunter him/herself and is collecting that 'nasty' stuff you talked about for policing purposes. In more simpler terms: You might have hacked the computer of an officer of the law.

In moral terms it all comes down to this simple, yet effective statement: If you murder a murderer, you yourself are a murderer. To keep things simple though, you are not above the law, and blackmail is still illegal. You yourself would end up in jail alongside the paedophile. Not just for blackmailing a paedophile, but for hacking his/her computer too. Double strike!

Canada Goose - July 14, 2020, 7:39 pm

7 - October 17, 2020, 11:03 pm

For me it really would depend on the reasoning of the payment.

Blackmail is bad yes but reporting it to the police is basically admitting that you have committed a crime by infecting the user and that in theory, you too had access to the material he did. If it was my sole mission to track down and report paedophiles, then resources would be needed and dedication. So, if the money paid was used to fund future operations then I would say it was for the greater good.

There is no right or wrong answer really. I think we all know the law is more of a guideline for those without morals

Report them anonymously and move on, due to the nature of your actions, reporting them while being fully aware that you infected them could also land you in jail, pedophile or not. I know this is a fairly old thread, but I would say it's ethically wrong because you're stooping to a level as low as blackmail, the morally right thing to do in this scenario is to report him to the authorities.

Jake Johnson - June 12, 2022, 9:45 am

Honestly, it's a pedophile so I would say yea blackmail them because they are literally the scum of the earth. However, the right and probably better thing to do would be to report the person to the correct authorities. If you blackmailed them and didn't report him then you just run the risk of them doing the same shit again because they always seem to repeat their actions. If you blackmailed them and then still reported them then you run the risk of getting caught for blackmailing and you just got yourself in trouble while attempting to do something good.
