Thread: Auto File Runner From USB?

Flare - July 16, 2020, 5:51 am

I have a whole idea set up to get someone with a RAT, But it will require a file to automatically to run once the USB is plugged in. Any software/Ways to do this?

What operating system in the device on? I know some autorun tricks for Windows 7 and before, I haven't personally used any on Windows 10.

Yes it is a windows 10, I did a lot of research on it, But apparently its impossible with windows 10, unless you have any tricks up your sleeve?

I remember there were some autorun USB Stick in past, not sure they are available or not. Its good searching for it.

I'll have a look, and get back to you if I find anything.

Fingers crossed

Sounds like an issue I ran into recently with windows if there is a workaround for an auto play without checking permissions first, putting scanning command into the bat file seems to bypass security scans if it thinks its already been read through, but launching the bat automatically without user input, prompts. or other commands, would be great. Say just casually sitting slide the usb in, a short talk later remove it with none the wiser.....
