Exactly what Scrub said, why don't you pretend to be an interested buyer and confront him when you go to "check out the bike"

Yeah my friend made a big mistake, he was mad and wrote to him that he wanted his bike back, my friend got blocked by him and he deleted the post from the facebook group :/

Edit: He has added a new bike for sale and we are gonna try to get in contact with him with my personal facebook account now

Have a friend message him and say he's interested then. If not it's 2020, just google his name.

Yeah i've tried to google but its an "fake" facebook account with a fake name so its hard. Me and my friends is trying to get in contact with the thief right now but with no progress.

BoysWhoCry - July 17, 2020, 3:55 pm

Contact the police with the proof is all you need. Or if you wanna be edgy make a fake facebook and offer to buy it.

?roye - July 17, 2020, 3:57 pm

Why don't you just report it to the cops?

Yeah we are trying to get in contact with him right now, we will probably get in contact with the police tomorrow.

I've literally done the same thing when a friend of mine had his phone stolen... you'd think it would be the first thing that comes to mind haha

On the real, ask to meet up and get the police involved before you go there with proof you own it.

Haha, I wouldn't get the cops involved personally but don't wanna be like yo, just go knock on his house incase OP isn't that kinda guy

Joy - July 18, 2020, 5:32 am

Do keep us updated on this if you get back your bike OP.
And yea probably get the police involved and confront them.

?Dødggygeez - July 18, 2020, 5:35 am

If it were me, I would get one of my other mates to message him that they are unlikely to know. Maybe from a different area. Go to buy the bike and just take it. Fight if you need to but you probably wont. Just remember the face and do what you gotta do.

Yeah we send him a message from my facebook account but with no respond. The thief has posted two more bikes for sale and we think they are probably stolen too. The ad of my friends bike is removed so its a chance that its already sold. Will keep you updated when the thief responds t our message.

Get another friend of yours with a good facebook profile to contact him and pretend to be interested in buying the bike....then you set him up
