

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Web dev section

Bossk - July 22, 2020, 6:20 am

I have noticed that the subforums under (Programming, Coding, and Languages) section are a little strange. There's subforums for meme languages like autoit(not a single member on this forum uses autoit for anything) and assembly lol? But no general web dev section. The closest you get is (Node JS, Javascript, and AJAX), but there's a separate PHP section..

I say that we dump the (Node JS, Javascript, and AJAX) and (PHP Development) and create a Web Development subforum. A user who needs input on a fullstack project is confused by the current layup.

Whats your take?

Xerotic - July 22, 2020, 8:09 am

Dude there's an entire TAB for web development.

Webmasters

S2K - July 22, 2020, 8:24 am

(Jul 22, 2020 06:20 AM)Bossk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) autoit and assembly
Autoit might be not important but come on, assembly?

Nachfolger - July 22, 2020, 9:43 am

Bossk.. What? Why would you drop two of the most popular sections (PHP, JS) in exchange for a generic category (that already exists).

Webmasters

Website Construction