they just tried to buy leaguesense for 1 month with their official email. be careful (especially for the low quality cheat providers) if they do the same to you and get you detected maybe

I don't know if I understood it very well, so you bought it through Akros?

This is just a bad way of advertising random anticheat client and your shitty paste aswell. It's easy to put their email by yourself in your store page and then screenshot email notification so people think "They" tried to buy it...

unlike you, i dont pretend to be a coding team that goes by the name feel-g00d, or pretend to be someone im not every day unlike you, i dont pretend to have UD cheats, that when I gave to a couple people LAUGHED at how shitty the code is.

you wont win, no one will ever trust you in this scene, its funny tho, u called me practically crying saying how broke u were, basically saying how bad u want to go legit, "dexter is best coder" words from ur retarded little mouth.

funny how we both get banned within 3 days of using ur shitty little "driver" u call a league cheat UD for over a year.

you then go on to say, oh but i have one but i wont sell it less than 4000$ and i already have a few people who are buying.

Your cheat was good (in hvh) for some time 2-3 months after the re-code came out, going to give you that.

lol your words don't phase me, you throw programming terms around that you have no idea about just to try and sound smart (i've read your ad and theres plenty of bs jargon in there)

You know jack shit about memory leaks otherwise you would have used it for your cheat instead of downloading some open source c#/vb.net one.

Tell me, which bit of the logic in a cheat would cause a leak?
There's literally 0 reason to write any code that would cause a leak when writing a cheat.

There's literally 0 reason to write any code that would cause a leak when writing a cheat.
example: bhop loop

Code Public Sub Bhop()

```
Dim ijump As Integer = Memory.rdInt(Memory.ClientDLL + Offsets.dwForceJump)

If ijump = 5 Then
    While Engine.GetAsyncKeyState(32)
        Static bFlip As Boolean = False
        Dim fflags As Integer = SDK.pLocalPlayer.fFlags

End Sub

End If

A Thread not sleeping has nothing to do with a memory leak. That's just CPU usage that's happening.

A memory leak happens when you allocate memory and don't clean up (deallocate it) after usage. An example would be tickrecords which don't get deleted properly.

If ijump = 5 Then
    While Engine.GetAsyncKeyState(32)
        Static bFlip As Boolean = False
        Dim fflags As Integer = SDK.pLocalPlayer.fFlags
        If fflags And 1 << 0 Then
            Engine.ForceJump(6)
        End If
    End While

If bFlip = True Then
    Threading.Thread.Sleep(1)
End If
bFlip = Not bFlip
End While
End If

End Sub

(credits how02 btw for the idea), (hf copy pasting this and be happy about not having to check for flags == 257 anymore like a retard) if the thread wouldnt sleep and the user would keep pressing spacebar, a memory leak would occur and it would get hot in here

That's not how02's stuff, he is not stupid enough to not know how to use IN_BUTTONS bitmask correctly, that's some wierd bhop code, really is a perfect example of copy-pasting, for some reason whoever made it know that flags variable is a bitmask, but doesn't know that "forcejump" is one too.

And it would of course not memory leak. Garbage collection almost makes the impossible in .net anyway, unless the coder is really really stupid.

You could do that, but it's much easier to just spoof your identity to the identity of an active user with access to both cheats.

Lastly, two funny findings. He says he has a driver, he doesn't and he says he supports Akros, he doesn't. He doesn't support it because the cheat process simply cannot access csgo.exe when Akros is active.

This code doesn't work when Akros is active.

Yes, it's a common strategy among providers like Vuno/legitsense/HighLimits to just deny everything always even when there is blatant proof they are wrong/telling lies.

Their average customer doesn't even read these posts with our warnings and unfortunately buys their poor products.

HighLimits actually is obfuscated and randomized quite a lot (eventhough it somewhat relies on optimization being disabled). So their "unique builds" are way more unique than legitsense (because they just fucking aren't, lol)

It's a matter of opinion. I respect yours of course, and understand the other side of the argument. Some people don't want lots of features.

In my opinion his features are low, and the cheat could be better with some more. CS:GO hacks have changed a lot in the last 3 years.
