Thread: Was Archive the best group?

ChangedmanTD - July 29, 2020, 4:53 pm

Looking at the members that were in the group, majority of them are either mentors or staff now.

So was archive the best group??

No, it wasn't the best group. The Alliance is a good historical group. Infamous group has survived throughout the ages. Lot's of groups in between. It's hard to pinpoint a "best".

whats up tommy i see you have returned not sure what the best group was tbh probably the marketers just because i respect the hustle.

It was a pretty decent group IIRC but not the best. I remember Adam did a good job with it but the owner of it was a dickhead which ruined it's image a bit.

Honestly never even heard of the group, some of the notable groups of the past had to be in my opinion were Red Lions, Prosperous, The Alliance

I liked the idea of the group and it had potential but it went poof pretty quick from what I remember.

Shout out to the malware removal teams. They get my vote.

Where is the archive group? Aren't you talking about the custom user group?

Prince™ - July 30, 2020, 12:41 am

I'd say one of the best groups existed here on HF, yes.

I can't believe you put Infamous on that list. Not sure about as of recent but when I was in the group it did nothing productive for the forum and was the most inactive group I've been apart off other then red lions

There is no best group, because the best group can be non-existing at this moment.

It's great to know we still have users who post whore and have no intentions of actually making a input in the discussion

How is it even groups originate if I may ask, as in where could I find information about groups on HF and how to create one, if I wanted / can

In order to create one you need to purchase it from an existing group owner which I assume is still pricey & You need to be approved by Omniscient

I can't post links but go ahead to the group section and you'll find some information there.

Now that I think of it, this probably was the best group. The MRT (formally HJT) group provided a great service to members. Their education for new recruits was incredibly in-depth.
