Thread: Bulk Vintage Clothing

phunted - July 29, 2020, 5:04 pm

Goodmorning to all,

I own a little vintage/thrift shop down here in the Gold Coast (Australia) with the demand on indie/vintage clothing has skyrocketed over the last few years and it can become very tough to maintain inventory. At the minute I spend literally all my spare time on marketplace, op shops, depop, physical markets, resales, ebay etc

I'm seeking a more productive way to keep up with the demand, if anyone knows of or is selling vintage clothing yourself please do contact me and I'll take it off you in a heartbeat.

Will pay heavy money for Original Grateful Dead artwork, clothes and vinyls.

Thank you plenty.

I spent at least 80% of my time in thrifts, op shops, garage sales, open pop ups etc, that's the exact way to start of your vintage brand however when reaching out for higher quality vintage goods you're better off outsourcing.

Already found 4 pairs of retro Nikes by having this thread up which is awesome.

I have around 120 dresses from the 50s, 60s, 70s and 80s. These were a collection my grandmother bought before she passed away at 69 in the early 90s. They are well preserved and I have actually been looking to open a store for them.

He clearly stated he wanted to create his own shop, you really think i'm going to sit here and try take his grandmas shit? Grow the fuck up you child.

It's called being genuine as I have years and years of experience in appraising vintage goods. A helping hand more so.

Go make another multi x
