<https://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/waves/>

I'm definitely a fan of the Waves Platform. I keep a close eye on it. I use the exchange and the wallet. I watched the value drop and the past year it's actually remained both steady and a small gradual increase. With the market changing I have not yet seem Waves move along the same arc.

So I have bought about $2000 worth of Waves at VATOP (value at time of post) $1.59.

I do not recommend anyone buy $xx,xxx worth but if you have maybe $500-$1000 laying around then I would add Waves to your existing portfolio for diversity.

Price target is $2.25 within 120 days.

NOTE: This is all my opinion and I am not professional investor.

SIM-3609092 - August 2, 2020, 7:53 pm

Your "not professional investor" opinion seems to have been pretty accurate recently! Might drop a couple hundred into it.

You seem pretty hung up about that particular coin, was it ETH? Did you lose big?

How can I start getting into buying alt currencies like this? And how do I go about selling them and all that? All I really know about currency exchanging is doing it through Coinbase or forum exchanges.

I would've personally gone with $ORN (Orion Protocol). CEO was the Chief Architect and creator of the Waves DEX (now waves.exchange) alongside partnerships with Elrond etc.

Waves is still a good buy but ORN will outperform hugely.

Omniscient - August 3, 2020, 1:47 pm

Quote: any chance it will return to its peak?

Slim to none for the foreseeable future. The whole market was crazy in Dec 2018. Those were not sustainable numbers. To return to their ATH of $18 they would have to see huge adaption and a big release with some must-have app. Even a high-end partnership isn't something I see happening.

Again, my realistic target is $2.25 within 120 days which oddly is December 1st, 2020.

Waves is up 5% today to $1.69.

And that's the wonderful thing about Waves. It's an exchange too. With the wallet you can deposit BTC, then exchange to Waves, ETH, or dozens of other assets. With Waves you can easily release your own tokens too.

But even more dangerous is the combination of having no clue and buying coins that ppl on the internet are suggesting you to buy.

Yea Omni's calls have been great so far and are probably well researched but this doesn't mean you should 'invest' money without doing the research yourself.

Just be careful, many people got burned by randomly investing in stuff they don't understand.

As per your questions: Changelly and Atomic wallet are simple (but expensive) ways to quickly buy crypto.

KYC = Know your customer: basically verification through passport etc.

do you think WAVES is better than ETH or has a chance of coexistence, because from what I've read so far I don't see how they could compete

I would say I would trust Omnis analyze more than I trust my own, I did research about Waves and I do my own research too, but coming from someone who's just starting out, I would say whatever someone with a lot more experience says would out beat my opinion.

If Omni who has been investing and even other big investors make bad calls, me as a newbie I would make even more mistakes, which I would learn from obviously.

I hope that made sense, at least in my head it does, but like everyone I don't know everything so maybe my way of thinking is completely wrong, I'm open minded and I'm pretty chilled so if you think I'm wrong in anything correct me, that way I can learn more.

Omniscient - August 11, 2020, 4:16 pm

Quote:do you think WAVES is better than ETH or has a chance of coexistence, because from what

I've read so far I don't see how they could compete

While trying to think of an answer I have it wonder in what sense do you mean "better"? Technology wise I think ETH is very strong. Waves is not likely ever going to replace something like ETH. Unsure if Waves launched in 2015 the same year as ETH did instead of 2017 if it would have changed everything. But the fact is that ETH has taken hold and led the way in the same way Bitcoin has. If anything that's proof of first-mover advantage. So on that premise I think Waves has a jump on the DEX market imho.

But I don't see them as competing products really. If I was to release and integrate an HF blockchain token it would be on the Waves platform.

I also know that Waves has taken a beating for the past couple years along with the rest of the market. And as the overall market begins a recovery I think there is value in name brands that have established themselves. Easy example is Doge, which is still #35 for market cap, can anyone explain that?

Omniscient - August 12, 2020, 8:55 am

It's the best way to trade crypto in my opinion. Your capital loss is essentially 0, as anything left is profit. Too many investors ride the rollercoaster instead of taking profits and end up missing out on some serious gains.

I am still holding. I've always thought Waves should be worth $20. Maybe it's finally going to get valued properly. If you've used their software you'd see how great it was. Does this that no other token does. Their DEX works very well imho. Being able to trade without KYC/AML and also keep your keys private is how it should be. If anyone has ever used wallets with swaps though services like Changelly would see how high the fees are, example is Exodus wallet. Everyone would save money and would add privacy if Waves was used.

I'm looking at the recent movements of Waves and I think it's attracting some DEFI investor attention. It seems to move when DEFI moves. Makes me think that it's in position to make some bigger pops. I know it hit $4.76 recently but it's pulled back to $2.60. That's a price worth accruing imho.

Putting this back into BUY with a target of $5 within 90 days.

Very. Waves jumped 13% today. #1 on CMC first page for daily percentage pump. You should have got in yesterday. :)

IMHO not too late for sure though. $2.96 right now.

I really think that DEFI may hit the Waves platform in a similar way to ETH. I certainly don't see why it can't.

Waves is not supported by Coinbase unfortunately. Coinbase is more for casual trading and position trading (which is just holding your assets for a long time, with the goal of realizing price appreciation, despite volatility), as well as the little bonuses you get every month for the new currencies that end up being picked up by them when you watch the videos. I have had nothing but nightmares with Coinbase anyway and it's only if you do small personal transactions or use iOS to daytrade.

Binance does though and I would highly recommend it to you depending on where you live. It is also for more experienced investors and traders, so there's a little bit of a learning curve but there's lots of tutorials on how to use the UI. It's like comparing a hard drive to a solid state drive.

If you live in the USA, you have www.Binance.us which is pretty much the same thing, however you have much less currencies that are supported within your wallet compared to the universal version of Binance (www.Binance.com) -- Thanks Murica!

Just read my posts in this thread.

Mainly just waiting for Waves to move. I still think $5 target is not only reasonable but low. Waves is #51 for market cap. I don't see any reason why it's not in top 25.

Tokens in top 25 right now include Huobi, Leo, cDAI, Cosmos, and OKB.

I consider that to be ridiculous. Top 25 is $1b cap which would triple the current value of Waves into the $12+ range. Which is exactly where I think it should be.

Is there something that makes WAVES stick out as a token? Is it based on the fact that the other tokens you mentioned are in the >25 spot?

$1B market cap is a far-fetch feat to achieve, something would need to carry it up there in my opinion.

Well, DeFi is an easy one. Waves is absolutely positioned to take advantage of that sector.

Price is $3,34 right now. I suppose the movements are not due to the Solana Integration.
Does anyone know what's happening right now?
Or maybe big news are to be announced.

Actually it did pump some with Solana news and it actually could be the reason. It could also be people figuring out that Waves can do DeFi.

This was my review of Waves in 2018. I can't believe I could write that well.

(Feb 23, 2018 10:36 AM)Mr Kewl Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Waves is honestly one of my favorite investment. (Not with regards to ROI, but with regards to technology.)

Let me break it down for you why

Fully Functioning Decentralized Exchange.

So many ICOs have come up and gone with the focus on Dex, but they're all theoretical, but with Waves, the product is working and is impressive.

Unlimited trading pairs

Unlike Poloniex or Bittrex, where your major trading pairs are USD/BTC/Eth in Waves, there is no one particular trading pair, you can exchange your Litecoin to buy a Tidex Token. You have a lot of tokens which you got in an ICO on waves platform? You can exchange it for another ICO token, without the need to convert it to BTC.

You can exchange your ICO 1 token with ICO 12 token, without needing to convert ICO1 to BTC to ICO 12 token. :)

Fiat Gateways:

Everyone hates websites like Coinbase etc, as they're centralized and a huge cost of fees is wasted in transferring to Bittrex etc to trade.

Well, you can buy BTC, Waves, Bitcoin Cash, Ethereum, Zcash, Litecoin using the Fiat Gateway, and they'll get directly funded in your wallet/dex which you can use to trade! :)

Commitment to decentralization:

Waves Platform is truly decentralized in nature, even when you have so many tokens/coins to deal with, you OWN your private keys, and no one has access to them except you. Which makes it a way better exchange than Bittrex/Poloniex/Binance.

Built for people:

The ideology of Waves is that it wants to provide access to Blockchain to the masses and that's why it was built

Easy Tokenization/ Building ICOs

You wanna make your own coin? ICO? Well in a general case, you need to learn programming to build smart contracts to make ERC20 tokens for yourself.

But with Waves, anyone can create tokens with a click of a button without learning to code. :)

Flat fee

There's a fixed transaction fee in the dex .003 Waves per transaction. Which is pretty dope imho.

Waves Fastest Blockchain

After enabling Waves N.G. Waves is supposed to be the fastest blockchain, when it comes to transaction time.

Also after N.G. It can handle thousands of transactions every minute, way better than Ethereum and Bitcoin.

Read More : <https://blog.wavesplatform.com/waves-ng-stress-test-results-in-44090f59bb15>

Someone has posted the roadmap, so I won't discuss things which are coming up in future, but they're pretty good. Smart Contracts will launch like next month, and there's hardware wallet support for Waves soon, which means all tokens built on Waves might get a hardware support as well and what not.

Few downsides I see is

The volume is pretty low in DEX, it's not like Bittrex where you place an order and things get sold no matter which coin it is, but then over time the issue will solve itself, as more awareness is produced.

The team has little communication issues, most of them are not that great with English, but they try not to let that come in the way.

The marketing isn't done well, with such an awesome product, very less people use it.

If you have anyone has any questions regarding Waves or its platform or what you can do with it, do ask. I can try to answer. :)

Full Disclosure:

I'm an active community member in Waves Community, and also advise few of the companies who are based on Waves Blockchain, also in good terms with the team. But this is my personal opinion.

Of course, I replied to Omni's thread, so he's been keeping an eye on the project for long time.

Also, I think it's getting closer to the time when I can integrate a Waves token into HF. I think 2021 would be a good year to make that happen. Potentially could make Bytes into a decentralized token issued by HF on the Waves Platform.

Lol, I have the same situation as you regarding identity verification aswell, it has fucked me up so many times online, anyway, I tried buying 10 USD and it looks like it uses something that's called AdvCash, which looks nice, it's not something like Blockchain or Coinbase where it requires all your identity papers.

edit: I looked it up more and looks like its still strict, but it makes sense because of fraud, prob best to just get BTC from a source then trade it Waves or whatever currency, which is what I do.

Quote: I bought a some a few hours ago, I'm pretty amazed at their platform and how you can exchange so many currencies so easily, while being decentralized, so far a better experience than Bisq, atleast for me.

I been trying to tell people this here on HF for years. Platform is good, works as needed, fees are reasonable, no KYC/AML, and you hold your keys. It does need more liquidity and volume though.

I know that Waves seems expensive now at $7 but I look at it as the overall market and Waves own market cap. It's not even $1b yet and it's imho technology and a blockchain worth at least that much.

Bitcoin is a 10 trillion dollar crypto currently only valued at 350m. So when it realizes full potential a Bitcoin will be worth $500k+. Waves and many other blockchains are going to have strong multi-billion dollar evaluations as well depending on their place and usages in crypto economy. I can see Waves being a big player with its decentralized exchange.

And yes, it hit the $7 today. Where does it go from here? Not sure, but I ain't selling.

Quote:Short-term perhaps. Isn't unsustainable long-term

I don't agree. The market bursting in 2018 shook out the weak projects and only the strong from that era have survived. The pump and dumps died. Waves is poised to be a top 25 alt. Currently at 40 btw.

I see, I don't think I put words in your mouth, not sure why you would imply that. I asked some general questions because your comment would apply to the whole cryptoverse and suggests that most, if not all, coins are pump and dumps.

You said that an asset would need "incredible" value display and "reasonable" logic to justify increase in price. My point was that every coin would be a pump and dump if what you said were true, including Bitcoin.

I'm not sure why the institutional interest narrative is being pushed as "reasonable" logic. Reasonable logic would be to identify why institutional investors are interested in BTC. For example, is it because the USD is falling in value and that there is an increase in the money supply (BTC/USD have an inverse relationship) which results in investors (institutional or not) to invest in stocks, commodities etc. Not sure if we're thinking about this differently here, or who is right in what "reasonable" logic means in this context (I suppose this is subjective).

Institutions have large capital and they sure have pumped up BTC, but they sure as hell can dump their $1bn+ holdings, whenever they want. I can only see speculation and hopium suggesting that institutions are here to hold BTC forever. I'm not sure whether I understand why that would reasonably be the case. Not suggesting that you're saying this. Just a general comment.

What notable value display has any coin made to justify their parabolic increase since March? I guess we should start with what you mean by value display before I jump to that conclusion to be fair.

I'm definitely a fan of the Waves Platform. I keep a close eye on it. I use the exchange and the wallet. I watched the value drop and the past year it's actually remained both steady and a small gradual increase. With the market changing I have not yet seem Waves move along the same arc.

So I have bought about $2000 worth of Waves at VATOP (value at time of post) $1.59.

I do not recommend anyone buy $xx,xxx worth but if you have maybe $500-$1000 laying around then I would add Waves to your existing portfolio for diversity.

Price target is $2.25 within 120 days.

NOTE: This is all my opinion and I am not professional investor.

Appreciate your insights have been reading your advice a lot lately. Wanted to ask if ya have any opinions about Cardano other than that's overhyped? From the research I have done looks really promising but at the same time I see a XRP pattern? Promising the moon and shilling. People only hope it gets big but no solid arguments to sustain it.

What's your take on it?

Omniscient - February 14, 2021, 10:36 am

Quote:Wanted to ask if ya have any opinions about Cardano other than that's overhyped?

It's one of those projects I have not spent much time researching. I will say that even if it's amazing. It's already highly priced at the #5 position. Just remember the higher on the ladder the harder the fall. I like finding stuff in top 200 that's going to move into top 100 position. That's where something will see a 200-300% gain. Cardano isn't likely going to move at a faster pace than the rest of the market at this time. You can even see it has been dipping the last 7 days struggling to maintain the #5 position.

I'm still a big fan of XMR btw. It's #20 and imho should always be top 10. Monero should be priced closer to $500+ but would need to be $1200 to be in current top 10 position which I don't think it can do without more exchange support.

Really you should be looking at my Divi thread. I know it's long but you can just read my own posts in the thread with this link:

I am loving the Waves Staking. I am earning some Waves everyday. I am depositing some BTC for staking too. What's nice is that it seems like zero-risk investment. I don't have to deposit my BTC into an exchange or DeFi account where I don't have keys. They pay you in a BTC pegged token called BTCLP. Says annual interest is 18%.

An example would be a defi project advertising huge apy. Everyone joins and adds liquidity. The dev has a function in the code allowing him/her to mint infinite tokens, then they sell it on the market and scam out. They can also add a function that makes users unable to sell their tokens.

I guess a rugpull is just anyway the devs can run off with people's money once they get enough liquidity in their project.

Says annual interest is 18%. I'd say there exists no system where you're making great money with "zero risk". Either way, my main reason for not going in with these Staking programs is because at the end of the day, you're going to make more by simply holding Bitcoin instead of these other coins where everyone is in it for the "risk-free 18% returns".

There's no max cap on Waves, so for all we know, yes you're getting 18% extra coins.. but inflation is 18% yearly.. so it basically means nothing unless the prices per coin keep going up by over 18%

That's the same on Ethereum which means every DeFi project running on their platform has the same problem.

Which is exactly why I don't hold any Ethereum haha. I just don't get why value should be going up other than people willing to turn a quick profit.

With Bitcoin there's an USE to holding. With Ethereum, what do I benefit from holding it other than hoping to re-sell it for a higher price in the future? Things to think about.

anmolpokhrel - March 5, 2021, 6:29 pm

I think waves is buy right now..

Hewlett Packard - March 7, 2021, 5:43 pm

Waves provides 48% APY for USDC staking. That will give me USDCLP token. I can use that and provide liquidity in swop.fi for USDCLP/USDN, which will give 20% APY. I can stake the proof of token I receive from providing liquidity and earn more rewards in SWOP and stake those to earn more. All of this while being near 0% risk? There's no impermanent loss(unless USDN goes to 0, in that case we are all doom) and no custodial. Is this correct understanding or am I missing something here?

anmolpokhrel - April 9, 2021, 2:22 am

Waves still buy or what...? somebody suggest me

Omniscient - April 9, 2021, 7:02 am

Waves just hit an ATH. Yes, that's right. They just passed their previous 2017 high. That's an immense milestone imho. It shows that Waves wasn't just hype and a pump during a bull market. It's fully returned to their high and surpassed it. We still have legacy cryptos like LTC, BCH, and a slew of others that haven't done this. ETH and BTC hit new ATH's and now Waves too.

I ain't selling yet. I don't know how high it can go. I continue to believe Waves should be in top 25. Currently it's 69 ($1.9b). To reach current market cap level of 25 will require Waves to hit a $6b market cap which is 3x current pricing levels. But maybe that's too aggressive looking at the new top 25 cryptos. So let's say top 50. Then it needs a $3.1b cap, which is a 60% price increase to about $31 a token.

This doesn't mean that at this point in the market that Waves is the best buy possible. But certainly I see value still unlocked.

Only guessing but Waves was peaked hard and I am unsure how well their DeFi platform is doing. Could be a lot of people over-leveraged and pulling funds from staking and liquidity pools.

I sold in the $30's, bought in at $21. Thinking to buy more at these prices. Under $15 represents a strong discount for the platform I believe will be here in many years to come.

What do you guys think about this algorithmic trading on waves? Do you use it? Its really tempting to put there some ETH & BTC for some insane returns like more 100% APY but probably there is something that i'm missing.

Don't throw more than you're willing to lose into it. Like anything with these types of returns, there's always going to be an above average risk. If the risk for 100% returns was the same risk for 2% returns, no one would touch the 2% returns option.

Thanks! One more question. Currently I have my funds on binance and want to move it from there. I really like idea of staking and some additional passive income. How safe is keeping your funds on dex like waves locked on some smart contract compared to hot wallet like for example exodus?

I am so far having mixed results the past couple months. I deposited Tether into their first Lambo which they say is now 63% but it was 110% when I invested. So far, my investment is down about 2% since May 9 when I invested. But I likely invested at a bad moment. Gonna see how it is in 6 months.

I have a USDC staking investment which says it's now 8% but was also higher. That is up 8% since March 29th. So that's done well.

I put some ETH into their Algo Trading. Says it's 125% now but since June 8th my investment is up .0176 ETH ($38).

I have some ETH LP staking too. That says 1.75% but I believe it was 8-12% initially. That's up about .041 ETH ($90). I have a reasonable amount staked into the low risk LP. I did an initial investment in March and have added more to the ETH LP every month.

I am okay with low returns for now. If the market turns around I believe the interest will rise. Also if I am just holding why not earn even just 2% more crypto with low-risk?

I think their Lambo investments are much higher risk.

Oh, also, my Waves staking is awesome. It's about 4-5% APR but it does the payouts daily. That's important because I can compound and restake every month. Total winner imho.

Quote:How safe is keeping your funds on dex like waves locked on some smart contract compared to hot wallet like for example exodus?

I don't see any issue with Waves. And once you setup the staking you can uninstall the app and go Cold Storage. It doesn't have 2FA on the desktop version. Not sure what options are available on the other options like mobile app.

He's wise enough to ask someone a question he can't answer himself. Nothing wrong with looking for advice from someone more knowledgeable than you in a field.

As for what to do with $20k...hmm...It's enough to spread it around a bit. Right now NFT's are hot and imho are only going to grow. I'd take 1/2 of that and place into NFT based chains like ENJ and their Efinity is new.

Maybe just $3k into WAX. It's cap #150 now but I have been watching it for a couple months. Also an NFT chain with good partnerships in sports.

Divi actually is probably poised to go back to .10 again which is a 100% return. I suspect that will happen within 6 months.

Staking is good and imho it depends if you want decentralized or an exchange. You should look into your options more deeply based on your location.

$20k is good chunk and you should get that into the market right away because we'll be in a clearly bull market by next month until next Feb/March when it will crash again.

I think Waves may have a harder time implementing more privacy methods than most. You either build it from the start or it never happens.

Nothing is stopping you from using Waves with a VPN. I know privacy not built into it but I also don't feel exposed using it.

I've had zero issues with their platform. I have yet to read anyone else having a problem. They also have staking for stablecoins like USDC with options for risk management (high, medium, low). This is where I hold a fair amount of my own investments.

Many good options.

I got some WX in the IDO. Wow what a jump. But it appears that it won't all be available for another year (Nov 25, 2022). Seems I get a little bit each block.

It's still a bit confusing. I have the WX but it is sort of connected to the USDN. When I go into the Pool you have to deposit equal amounts of WX and USDN for the pool.

Then there is gWX which is the governance token. So much stuff to review. Just glad I got my WX from the IDO. Looks like a huge win.

WX is being burned also <https://waves.exchange/liquiditypools/stats>

Out of the 51,750 released right now 41,400 got burned. Another 10% of that is being locked away with avg lock time of 2 years right now.

It's still a bit confusing. I have the WX but it is sort of connected to the USDN. When I go into the Pool you have to deposit equal amounts of WX and USDN for the pool.

Then there is gWX which is the governance token. So much stuff to review. Just glad I got my WX from the IDO. Looks like a huge win.

IMO the simplest option which is to sell is the wisest right now. The price right now is insanely high.

I can't sell. It's locked for one more year released every block. I have 1000 WX. That means about 2.74 WX per day will be released to me. I will probably get my WX weekly which is about 20 WX. Then either stake it, grab gWX or sell it. Since I have $1000 invested to get those 1000 WX even just a week from now at current prices is a 100% profit.

Will these prices hold though?

Right now I think we have around 0.25% unlocked.

$0.25 \times (1/365 \times 100) \times 60 = 4.10\%$ of initial investment already claimed.

About the calculation:

6 hours have passed so that is $1/4 = 0.25$ of a day (24h)

Daily we receive $1/365 \times 100 = 0.27\%$ of the the WX purchased in IDO.

The current price is $60 which is 60 times higher the IDO price.

Making 4% of the initial investment in 6 hours is not bad.

I wonder how much time we will need until we make 100% of our IDO purchase.

Porn - November 25, 2021, 4:04 pm

Everyone who bought the IDO is up 6,000% right now, I think the reason why people are buying WX so high is because staking APY is 172,395.89%

1 WX is worth $60 or 3 WXUSDNLP with an estimated annual staking reward of 272 WX or $16,175.54

I locked up $100 of WX at current prices for 4 years. I own 0.15% of the governance pool right now meaning it's about 1.64 WX a day (distributed weekly) meaning I'll make ROI in a couple days whatever else I get from then on is free and when it unlocks in 5 years.

Really impressed with WX being stable around $20 at the moment.

It's a 2000% rise and the IDO took place ~20 days ago.

How much did you guys get into for WX?

One thing though is that you have to stake WX and USDN together. A bit of a pain. I have to actually sell something and do an exchange to get that USDN. I unstaked some USDT in the Waves account so I should be able to start trading that for USDN and then staking into WXUDNLP.

They can add w.e they want of their share. Secondly they are probably doing this to increase the amount of wx needed for boost i had 5wx to get to 3x. This was unsustainable and blasting wx into circulation causing rapid price decrease. Rapid price decrease leads to poor market sentiment decreasing price even more as people have insane roi dumping their wx. Their 1m WX lock probably saved WX from just face planting.

Waves price is lately reflecting the announcement coming.

In my honest opinion something huge is going to be announced in 5 days.

Unfortunately, sold all my Waves to buy WX. Maybe I am buying again really soon.

What are your thoughts?

BTW, I really like how Waves is evolving. Some months ago Waves Ducks started. The concept was really great and the early investors could have insane returns.

After that follows WX token. The price has dropped but it is 400% higher than the initial one.

Today I see about an IDO taking place in 3 days about Meta Race a 3D game in Waves Ducks.

<https://twitter.com/racemeta>

Seems a great game compared to the majority of GameFi projects. I'll try participating in the IDO BTW.

Last, there is the announcement coming which I am sure won't dissappoint us.

All these make me perceive Waves as a quality project. The amount of apps is not big but I really like the ideas behind them. We should also note that the returns of possible investments(WX, EGG token) have been really great until now.

If Waves manages to increase the amount of DAPPs running on its blockchain without dropping their quality it's going to be one of the biggest players and will compete with the biggest projects like Cardano and BSC.

In this case Waves price is going to explode. Considering the speed with which other projects are evolving more DAPPs should be developed quickly though.

Anyway, I feel positive about Waves and it's the smart contract blockchain(of the top 100) I am most bullish on.

Omniscient - December 17, 2021, 11:42 am

One issue is their on/off ramp pricing with their bridges. I don't know if they can overcome that.

I wasn't a fan of their Ducks NFT. I felt like it was an attempt to take advantage of the NFT hype but ultimately felt like Crypto Kitties (aged).

Unfortunately I did sell some Waves this past week when it was dumping. I just can't be sure that Waves is going to continue being their focal point over something like WX or other products. Feels like they are distracted. I profited well so I didn't mind selling.

A lot of my trading tanked too. The market has not been kind to Waves. And why are you doing algo trading of Waves vs just staking it? Staking gets 3-6% without risk of loss of your Waves.

I check it weekly so I can convert it to the investment into the WX/USDN pool. I locked some for the max (4 yrs) into the WX Staking/Boosting page. I have about 60 WX in that.

I originally grabbed 1000 WX. WX had a moment worth $80 but now worth $1.27. I don't know if long term it's going to pay but whatever. Waves did pretty well for me overall. I didn't get out in peak but I didn't lose either.

I'm not sure I like WX. Seems like since it was launched that Waves has suffered. Almost taking attention away from their main token. Do you get WX or do you get Waves? Then they have gWX (governance token) which I ain't even sure has value or what to do with it. I think I get gWX by staking WX but you also earn staking of WX by locking and the longer you lock the more you earn. Slightly complex for something that appears partially meaningless.

I do know that with the AETHLPM I have lost nearly .5 ETH. That totally sucks. I could have staked that 2.0 and earned instead of lost. The BTCLP and ABTCLPM has done better for me and earned the difference though.

TOUGH TOUGH market is really what's going on right now. Hope it turns around by summer.

Governance rewards (Literally released today) and gWX will be used for governance voting. WX is used for trading fees with 50% discount. It still imho hasn't caught on as well as it could. That under $10 price recently was the buy moment obviously. 300% return in just a couple weeks. Huge win for someone out there. Still not sure if the pump was Russian/Ukraine related. Waves doesn't have huge liquidity and so even $100m movement in a week is going to do something.

The importance of finding good projects with strong development is absolutely essential for long-term investment. Basically if the investment isn't long-term, then it's shit. Waves has a long-term plan and development. You have to ask yourself will this project be doing something in 3-5 years? If the answer is no, put your money somewhere else.

Isn't LP staking guaranteed to be positive? The chart on Waves also shows that it's been positively increasing.

Quote: At any time, you can unstake ETH, i.e. exchange your ETHLP assets to ETH assets at a new, increased rate. The difference in ETHLP price when you start staking and exit staking will be your income. This difference can only be positive. You can find out more in the FAQ.

Waves price is lately reflecting the announcement coming.

In my honest opinion something huge is going to be announced in 5 days.

Unfortunately, sold all my Waves to buy WX. Maybe I am buying again really soon.

What are your thoughts?

BTW, I really like how Waves is evolving. Some months ago Waves Ducks started. The concept was really great and the early investors could have insane returns.

After that follows WX token. The price has dropped but it is 400% higher than the initial one.

Today I see about an IDO taking place in 3 days about Meta Race a 3D game in Waves Ducks.

<https://twitter.com/racemeta>

Seems a great game compared to the majority of GameFi projects. I'll try participating in the IDO BTW.

Last, there is the announcement coming which I am sure won't disappoint us.

All these make me perceive Waves as a quality project. The amount of apps is not big but I really like the ideas behind them. We should also note that the returns of possible investments(WX, EGG token) have been really great until now.

If Waves manages to increase the amount of DAPPs running on its blockchain without dropping their quality it's going to be one of the biggest players and will compete with the biggest projects like Cardano and BSC.

In this case Waves price is going to explode. Considering the speed with which other projects are evolving more DAPPs should be developed quickly though.

Anyway, I feel positive about Waves and it's the smart contract blockchain(of the top 100) I am most bullish on.

Great to see Waves performing as expected. Made some great profits since I bought back at decent levels.

Not sure about the current situation though. Anyone has any idea how easy it is to resolve the USDN issue?

The majority of the USDN issue is retail panic as people try to get to USDC/USDT even if it means selling their USDN on the open market for less than $1. Repeg will likely take time, if everything goes well expect the ecosystem to become even more resilient to FUD/Attacks.

If USDN is collateralized by 240%, how has it depegged so heavily? (I see $0.78 right now but low point on CMC is $0.70)

Price would have to fall closer to $0.40 before there's any real danger. Is there something else I'm not seeing that has people's faith in USDN in the gutter?

These are the accounts that are causing all the problems:

<https://vires.finance/as/3PEEsRmcWspCxbKqobvKY3axW1846AMRwzr> 8

<https://vires.finance/as/3PMUTKmtJxfG5pWZYwRcabnP16HYqo4fYK7> 6

<https://vires.finance/as/3PPuzqQC4bHxWitTyndySGcaMzHHNGipQns> 6

Combined, the 3 accounts are borrowing $271.8M USDC (of $303M borrowed) and $230M USDT (of $258.4M borrowed). They are all over -100% daily APR, losing about $1.4M per day. They are supplying 1M WAVES (worth $31M) and $670.1M USDN as collateral.

They have no locked VIREs. So why do it?

Lowering borrow APR to 40% would make the USDT/USDC lockout situation last longer. We need to make it more urgent for these accounts to repay the borrowed USDT and USDC. Have higher borrow APR when it's at extreme levels like this and harsh liquidation penalties.

shreder - April 6, 2022, 7:33 am

Sasha already addressed that it wasn't his $300m you can trace the teams publically known addresses since ICO. What you are seeing is the mechanism of NSBT where NSBT stakers are currently swapping USDN to Waves and selling it arbitraging daily for 5-13% gains. USDN is completely pegged on the smart contract meaning it's backed 1 to 1, in fact, it's over collateralized eventually it will stabilize.

I'm still rather new to the waves ecosystem but even I understand the team isn't going to throw away the entire ecosystem for $300m.

Omniscient - April 6, 2022, 10:01 am

After all these years of pushing and developing the Waves ecosystem as well as some recent roadmap additions, I find it incredibly hard they're gonna rug pull or sell out their tokens. Not that it can't be true but I just don't believe it to be. I haven't seen any evidence that indeed that's what they are doing. Sasha actually posted direct evidence that this is competitor manipulation and attack. Which I find credible.

btw, USDN up to .94 and Waves is at $28. USDN imho will be back at the $1 peg within a week.

This will make Waves stronger in the long run. This might even be getting it a lot of attention.

USDN is slowly regaining an open market peg, mind you USDN was never unpegged on the smart contract it was backed 1:1 the entire time. Only panic sellers and lack of liquidity caused the open market price to unpeg. I've profited greatly off weak hands, also this should fully stabilize after another 1-2 weeks.

Really happy with my WX investment. The only one performing well during these bloody days.
Strangely, WX has been a hedge lately. Maybe due to the low current supply and the low trading volumes which make it correlate less with the rest of the market.
Maybe it is in the 1% of the coins doing well during this time.
At the same time, I am really dissapointed with USDN which keeps depeping and makes me anxious.
Waves has performed really baddly as well.

What are your thoughts on WX and USDN?

Markets overall continue to destabilize. And I'm glad I got my WX as well. Still have 500 from left to get unlocked from the IDO. Waves costs $6.24 at the moment. Decent price IMO but I'd select other cryptos to hold for long-term.

Particularly, Oasis Network, a project I like seems to improve a lot faster than Waves and I'd consider it a greater long-term investment. I may still grab some Waves though, a/ firstly to diversify a little and also b/ I've noticed that Waves tend to stabilize for a period of time and then makes a big spike.

IMO Waves needs some more Dapps. Additionally, I am dissapointed to see that Waves Ducks has become inactive and Meta Race which was supported by Waves has no updates for 3+ months despite offering an IDO in December...

<https://mobile.twitter.com/racemeta>

Notice the stability of the last 4 months

Notice the 3 massive spikes. The last and biggest one happening during the bear market.

Regarding WX, I was impressed to see it performing well when the rest of the market was bleeding. Right now it is worth $1.02 almost reaching its IDO price. Not sure how it is going to perform in the future.

What is important about it is that by locking it you can pretty easily influence the emission of the Waves exchange pools. And I think that even small whales can benefit a lot from that. This can trigger an increase of its price IMO.

On the downside, after providing some liquidity and experimenting with pools I noticed that whales can easily benefit against small liquidity providers. That's why big gWX owners(whales locking their WX) have a lot of influence on emissions and they can change them every 2 weeks by voting. So a small pool offering today 100% APY may drop to 10% in 2 weeks if a whale decides to vote for another pool. That's significant instability in returns and can easily dissapoint those participating mostly in small pools.

I'll continue experimenting with Waves Exchange though. Maybe locking even small amounts of WX is not a bad idea, I do not think that this is the case though.

I've also made some decent returns from selling my WX when the price was still at good levels. I've stopped selling WX though since the returns have become really narrow.

Regarding gWX could you elaborate? Other than voting I know that gWX owners receive part of the fees. Is that a decent return considering that you can not withdraw your WX for a period of time though?

ep1capple - August 8, 2022, 9:14 pm

Today Waves team released the much anticipated $SURF token which stands for Smart Utility Recapitalization Feature that will further stabilize Neutrino their algo stablecoin, designed to improve the mechanics of recapitalizing USDN reserves. I believe there's money to be made in partaking in the stabilization of usdn. Here's a link on how it works and how to make money on it

<https://medium.com/neutrino-team/what-is-surf-and-why-is-it-important-for-the-neutrino-ecosystem-8962c2230049>

Also as Circle is forced to blacklist more Ethereum addresses under US sanction laws, we will see a bigger participation and desire from retail to park funds in stablecoins that can't be frozen. Algo stablecoins aren't done yet. In fact for the sake of DeFi industry we need one of them to pop off whether it's USDN, USDD, MIM, FRAX or whichever one.

I'm not sure what the plaintiff hopes to accomplish here to be honest.

Today I withdrew almost all my USDN from the WX IDO.

I am writting here to remind everyone who invested in the WX IDO that there is the possibility to receive USDN instead of WX. If you want to do this I'd recommend you do it now. USDN is constantly depeped and once it falls below a ceratain level you can't withdraw USDN. Instead you can only receive WX.

Right now price should be above $0.9 per USDN. Until some days ago it was above $0.95 per USDN and I couldn't withdraw for more like a month...

As for USDN, it is constantly below $1. Mostly ranges from $0.9 to $0.95.

I am thinking of dumping my small holdings and taking the loss (5-10%).

Should I do so? Or maybe wait for it to reach $1?

Honestly I'd prefer to wait. But seeing it constantly significantly below $1 and considering the situation of the market maybe the loss of 5-10% is worth avoiding the risk of waiting further.

Upbit made a warning about WAVES and USDN.

Upbit seems to be a big Korean exchange and sent its users a warning email.

USDN is constantly depegged BTW. And the situation with it doesn't look so good.

It's backing ratio is so low right now. <https://neutrino.at/stats>

If I was to select the next stable to collapse, I'd pick this one.

https://twitter.com/CryptoCue_/status/1600834989796605957

BTW, I had an amount of USDN which I sold last week at a loss.

Still it seems it was a good choice.

If you still hold USDN and Waves you may reconsider thinking about holding it.

Made my research about it last week and I was not happy with what I found.

I think USDN really screwed Waves. And WX didn't help. They went for it and it's failing. People trying to do huge returns via DeFi seem to be getting bit in the ass for it. It works short-term then destroys the market in the end.

When I started this thread Waves was $1.59. We're almost back to that price. My guess is Waves goes to under $1. Depending on their policies, I might jump back in again. I'd be happy to see them restructure, maybe even an audit.

I trust Sasha less and less as I become more and more familiar with them.

Quote:Waves Statement on DAXA investigation into WAVES token.

Upbit and Bithumb have today notified users of risks they see as associated with Waves due to USDN depegging. Therefore, Waves is issuing a message to the Waves community to clarify the situation.

We recognize the common due diligence requirements from Upbit and Bithumb, especially in light of current market conditions. We are working closely with their teams to fully support them in their investigation and alleviate serious and obviously damaging misunderstandings of the relationship between WAVES and USDN. We are extremely confident in reaching a resolution within the two-week investigation period.

According to their statement, Upbit and Bithumb believe that WAVES price could become volatile due to USDN depeg. However, USDN is a separate project built on Waves blockchain that uses WAVES as collateral; it is not intrinsically linked to WAVES token. There is only one way in which USDN can directly affect WAVES price - through redeeming WAVES from the contract and selling WAVES on the market. However:

Only 4.2% of the WAVES total supply is held in the Neutrino Smart contract[1], equating to only 9.8% of the daily trading volume across all exchanges.[2]

USDN plays no role in the issuance of WAVES and cannot inflate WAVES supply.

It is impossible to drain the entire reserves due to the daily swap limits set on Neutrino and backing rate protections[3]

Therefore the effect of entirely redeeming all WAVES in the smart contract would be negligible and there is zero new issuance of WAVES.

For these reasons, Waves is confident the concerns regarding WAVES tokens are unwarranted misinformation. Waves representatives are in contact with both Upbit and Bithumb teams and will continue to cooperate with them to correct this misunderstanding. We hope to bring this investigation to a close in the coming days and we remain fully committed to upholding complete transparency with you, our community, throughout this process.

What's your issue with the statement? You think something in there is false or misleading? I think it's possible USDN can fall apart and Waves just takes a hit but survives. The issue for me is that the hit to Waves is likely going to push it well under $1. And confidence in the project will be ultra low. Thus any new projects related to Waves is likely going to be a loser as well.

Not false or misleading, I believe the warning by Bithumb/Upbit isn't entirely accurate to begin with so I don't have an issue there (seems like they think it can death spiral similar to UST/LUNA), I just think it lacked substance regarding USDN in general. I think a larger statement about the USDN volatility should have been made, not just quickly brush off concerns (I've felt like a larger conversation has needed to happen for a while). Now's a perfect time to educate people on how USDN works and what the roadmap is for maintaining it, help ease concerns when FUD is flying. For months it's been anything but stable Sasha has been taking pretty drastic and dangerous measures to try and defend it, and it seems like many are oblivious to it.

It just feels like it's a 1-man show to me, and I never feel like I have clear insight as to what's going on. Transparency is big for me.

LTC doesn't have the liquidity. Basically looks like the exchange is dead for activity. It's over 4 ETH ($5k) I'm holding in the wallet. I'll look into other chains but my guess is they aren't liquid either.

I already looked at USDT and even USDN. And ETH only has a few pairs so I'd really have to likely go Waves/ETH trades. Once I did that I could withdraw to an exchange using native Waves and then trade there.

How typical. ETH open now and had I waited 2-3 days I'd have saved myself over a G. Sucks.
Feels like if I held it there it would still be suspended and/or ETH price would plummet. Meh.

Waves bye bye (pun intended).

Looking at withdrawing but the exchange fees are ridiculous. Exchanging $1000 usdt to busd for example is going to cost over $40. What a joke.

Nope. Not anymore. It's essentially collapsing after adding some new projects (Neutrino Stablecoin) which are failing inside the Waves ecosystem.

Waves token itself imho if it hits under $1 might be a buy again if things stabilize or imho if they let Neutrino die.

Great returns in the previous bull market and a good trade. But not sure if buying again is worth the risk in the next bull run.

Significant manipulation took place in the previous bull market.

I especially didn't like some of their attempts to monetize that completely failed like their NFT Duck Eggs. Maybe Waves will regain some former glory but at some point you just want to get off the roller coaster.

Yeah, Waves had their moment then tanked. I got out fully. Sad because I really did like the project. Was more original in nature than what I see from other projects.
