you can't really resume your personality to a bunch of letters and its been empirically shown that taking the test at different times of the day would give you different results based on your mood

I'm an ESFP - for anyone wondering, this is called MBTI (Myres Briggs Type Indicator). Having these done in the workplace is very useful, for understanding how people think and act within the team.. and can often totally break down previous barriers .. i.e. and Extrovert (E) always being annoyed at an Introvert (I) for not speaking up in meetings... but actually, they are observing and taking it in and probably can't get a word in because all the E's are talking over one another.

Another thing to note is that your 4 letter type is just your natural PREFERENCE. Everyone is capable of operating outside of their type (a feeler (F) can be a thinker (T) ... it's just not their natural preference)

Advocate...

The Advocate personality type is very rare, making up less than one percent of the population, but they nonetheless leave their mark on the world. Advocates have an inborn sense of idealism and morality, but what sets them apart is that they are not idle dreamers. These individuals are capable of taking concrete steps to realize their goals and make a lasting positive impact.

After reading the results... Seems pretty accurate lol. Good and bad stuff.
