Dopamine - August 8, 2020, 11:43 am

You have to choose between alcohol or weed.

What is your choice and why?

Artisan - August 8, 2020, 11:46 am

I choose weed coz it used to be a mood uplifter for me and I like the thought processes that happen while high, whereas alcohol doesnt have anything similar.

You're right bro, I also love weed for thoses reasons.

And for sure I love to not puke with weed lmao

?roye - August 8, 2020, 11:50 am

I'd rather smoke weed than drink alcohol.

Bossk - August 8, 2020, 11:51 am

If I had to exclude one for the rest of my life i'd certainly remove weed as it's very, very rare that i use it.

Azythum - August 8, 2020, 11:53 am

Alcohol but not strong, just a little beer.

Bacardi Cola Lime - August 8, 2020, 11:54 am

Alcohol has messed me up countless times while moderate weed use has never harmed me. So weed.

Yeah I had to quit both they were interfering with my daily life and work life way to much.

Don't even get me started on Benzos, my god I almost died multiple occasions with Xanax/Klonopin/Valium,etc...

To say the least I had a problem but I am clean now. Thank Jesus.

Is this question for real? Obviously weed.

I don't drink alcohol, unless I go on a night out; I don't feel the need to drink alcohol during the day.

Plus weed is better for you, gives me a better perspective of life, calms me down, makes me think more, and everything is better whilst high.

And I wake up feeling fresh

I don't smoke anymore, was making me feel stupid. I usually just drink beer every weekend, so if I had to choose it would definitely be alcohol. Plus I prefer social drinking, I hate being around people when I'm baked.

Fair enough, alcohol definitely isn't nice but I can drink beer along with a meal or just in general. I actually don't mind the taste of most beer, but then again I'm Australian. And yes you can, just don't get drunk before you smoke, get high before you drink. When I used to smoke with people, I'd be the biggest buzzkill because I'd just be off in my own world and hardly talk (after the first 30 minutes I'd zone out completely) so I'd have to drink to lift my mood up. Obviously it's different for everyone though. I have nothing against bud, I think it's better than drinking alcohol tbh I just prefer alcohol.

Not a fan of weed highs, I'll choose alcohol any day.

Injun Joe - August 8, 2020, 7:54 pm

I choose weed because it helps me focus on the music I listen.

Darkie Smith - August 8, 2020, 11:40 pm

I've just legitimately never enjoyed alcohol. Even when younger, before ever touching a hard drug and even after. I must pick weed, as until I did try hard drugs I thought it was the best thing ever and wanted to smoke all day everyday. Between frying myself doing stupid shit when I was about 16,17 freshly dropped out of school to continue a career of crime - and just maturing, I really don't smoke as much anymore. If I do smoke all day for whatever reason, I'm spreading it out significantly, like 0.2g over 2-3g; but do like to smoke at night which is now, max, probably 0.5g(if alone,) when that'd be a nightly routine of atleast 2g alone.

I just never got the appeal of alcohol. The only time I truly truly wanted to drink is when I was going through the hotboy phase and it mixed with xanax would make me do whatever I wanted without fear of consequence, until I learned that the chance of consequence was tripled.

Weed (depending on the strain) is so much smoother than alcohol, I hate the taste of most alcoholic beverages.

Recently I did however start drinking pear cider, it was a very dry one in a can, but I got used to it.

Weed, definitely! Alcohol isn't my thing. I always get terrible hangover and depressed feeling next day.

Wafflemonger - August 9, 2020, 1:48 am

I would choose alcohol. I've only smoked weed once or twice in high school. Never really cared for that or any other smoking product. Alcohol I don't really drink either, maybe once a week? Depends on if I have something to celebrate or not. I rarely drink "just because".

In general; Weed. Why?

- < Relaxed state of mind (or creative)
- < Munchies or laughing more than usual
- < Best vibe to enjoy nature, music or anything great for the Soul
- < No hangover or whatsoever the next day, perhaps a bad memory is all

Why I dislike Alcohol in general, not saying everybody is like this;

- < Getting aggressive (more tempered or a 'bad drunk)
- < Harassing girls (never heard someone being raped after a spliff... while going out.. I did hear when someone was drunk)
- < The hangover is worse, feels like dying every time again

You're so right bro I'm not completely against opiates, but for recreational use its best to not even try. If you need them for pain and can follow a regimine taking them as intended, is different than starting out taking them for fun (or an extra dose, or not using the reccomended ROA)

If you've been on pain management, and since you seem to not be one of the many many youngins here, im sure you know about what I'm about to say. But I'ma ramble on anyway because it's easy to look at drugs in a glorified way on the internet, ignoring the negatives saying "Ahh just gotta learn that moderation. Shouldn't have messed with it if you didnt!"

Look at opiates. Regularly sniffing and otherwise abusing pain pills like oxys, morphines, and dilaudid Which bring you around the scene of illicit use. Dilauidids are extremely popular to IV for the rush from the fast onset of it crossing the blood brain barrier so fast when injected. Then you see that and hear addicts talking about it and it begins with "just trying out a quarter or a half." Someone IVs you and that's it. You sniff a few more until you get dude to hit you again - and this time you pay attention so you can do it again yourself sometime. Any fear of needles - I don't care what one says is then gone.

Some time later, depending on how much and how often you use, you're only IVing, oxy doesn't do anything for you anymore and the Dilaudid stops getting you high after the rush.

Now being around IV users someone gives you a bag of H or Fent (or both) that cost about half the price of one pill, you do half and get a rush and a high you haven't had in a long while. You decide you wana do a bag at once one day, then think you'll go back to the pills. That $20 bag last all day when you'd usually use 2 $30 pills. Within a year or two, but possibly even less- it really depends on your level of access to it (money.) Already screwing up at your job, the check isn't cutting it anymore to feed the habit and you wind up doing something stupid. Whether it be stealing from work, getting arrested for theft or other crime for financial gain, or just straight skipping work because your check from 4 days before is gone, so you go try and make some actual cash on hand or start taking on loan after loan you fall behind on.

Then that income source is gone because it's obvious you're strung out to everyone but yourself. And you become desperate doing things you'd never thought you'd do, degrading things to make money for more - or just to be paid in dope directly. Probably try Meth one day because you're broke, sick, and someone tells you it'll help. So now you start throwing that into the mix on days you got a few extra bucks after buying your fix.

This isn't my story, but it's pretty much a simplified and condensed summary of most people i've seen fall into opiates bad. Some never actually do IV, but get just as bad anyways. Most junkies aren't very successful criminals, especially if all they had really done before is smoke weed, maybe sell a few dime bags and drink under age. Even if you do manage to slightly get by, working a shit job no one cares you're blitzed at because it's just labor and you'll break your back working to support that habit. Or risking some serious prison terms as of recently.

I saw almost this exact spiral happen to some spoiled kid, (not even 21 at this point), who was waiting in a driveway of a dopehouse early morning because his dealer was waiting for his. This local junky chick pulled up, knocked on the door and said something for them to let her come in. Him thinking (for w.e reason) he's good at that point, goes to walk up to the house too but instead see's this MS13 dude (we live near mexico town in Ameica, kek) barge in and beat the dude (who was frail, half his size) and his wife. He made the dude beg for his wife's life before executing them both over allegedly selling something to a family member of his that OD'D and died. The strung out rich kid ran to his car once he saw a gun, so he didn't see the whole thing but heard it all as he left. The house had cameras but the audio wasn't clear - so they brought him in and showed him the tape and asked him to narrate what was being said. He acted all disturbed and like he wanted to get sober, and died a half mile down the street 2 months later after buying dope from the same house and shooting it on his way out.

To make a long story short, (tl;dr) doesn't matter how well off you are, stable, ect. No one is above becoming just another dead junky.

Within a year or two, but possibly even less- it really depends on your level of access to it (money.) Already screwing up at your job, the check isn't cutting it anymore to feed the habit and you wind up doing something stupid. Whether it be stealing from work, getting arrested for theft or other crime for financial gain, or just straight skipping work because your check from 4 days before is gone, so you go try and make some actual cash on hand or start taking on loan after loan you fall behind on.

Then that income source is gone because it's obvious you're strung out to everyone but yourself. And you become desperate doing things you'd never thought you'd do, degrading things to make money for more - or just to be paid in dope directly. Probably try Meth one day because you're broke, sick, and someone tells you it'll help. So now you start throwing that into the mix on days you got a few extra bucks after buying your fix.

This isn't my story, but it's pretty much a simplified and condensed summary of most people i've seen fall into opiates bad. Some never actually do IV, but get just as bad anyways. Most junkies aren't very successful criminals, especially if all they had really done before is smoke weed, maybe sell a few dime bags and drink under age. Even if you do manage to slightly get by, working a shit job no one cares you're blitzed at because it's just labor and you'll break your back working to support that habit. Or risking some serious prison terms as of recently.

I saw almost this exact spiral happen to some spoiled kid, (not even 21 at this point), who was waiting in a driveway of a dopehouse early morning because his dealer was waiting for him. This local junky chick pulled up, knocked on the door and said something for them to let her come in. Him thinking (for w.e reason) he's good at that point, goes to walk up to the house too but instead see's this MS13 dude (we live near mexico town in Ameica, kek) barge in and beat the dude (who was frail, half his size) and his wife. He made the dude beg for his wife's life before executing them both over allegedly selling something to a family member of his that OD'D and died. The strung out rich kid ran to his car once he saw a gun, so he didn't see the whole thing but heard it all as he left. The house had cameras but the audio wasn't clear - so they brought him in and showed him the tape and asked him to narrate what was being said. He acted all disturbed and like he wanted to get sober, and died a half mile down the street 2 months later after buying dope from the same house and shooting it on his way out.

To make a long story short, (tl;dr) doesn't matter how well off you are, stable, ect. No one is above becoming just another dead junky. Yeah bro I don't recreational use my opiates (dilaudid) I have a medical license for this because I was involved in a big accident. I asked 2 weeks ago for a medical weed license at my doctor. He'll get back to me later with this but for now I have no choices to use them for the pain. It's not my favorite things, I smoke recreational weed for now and take the less dilaudid possible.

I don't do any drugs for months but on my drugs years I would pick Alcohol any time over Weed.
