Honestly, I bought an Instagram bot and followed the users who are active in certain hashtags, and I started gaining followers everyday. It may not be many, but people follow and they do react to my posts. Maybe consider that. Most bots are only around $15. And they're legit accounts.

from my experience. Having an HQ Pfp and Description and when starting at zero using Hashtags that arent over-saturated. stick with relative Hashtags that have less than 400k Posts. so you'll be easier to find. once you get the following then start using bigger tags. also simple SEO tips Ignore the guy who suggested bots. You might grow for a week, or a month, or 3 months but eventually Instagram will limit your reach and your shadow ban may last forever.

Theme pages are the easiest pages to grow and a great side hustle!

It may be a cringy saying but "content is king". Make original content that has a consistent design (that matches your logo and story highlights), have a streamlined bio that very concisely and clearly states what your page offers and end with a follow CTA (call to action).

Whilst your small focus on qualitative methods of growing. Reply to every DM, every comment, get to know other small creators in your niche and engage with them. Create very detailed posts rather than just viral posts with detailed captions.

Once you pass the 10k mark you can focus on methods than focus on quantity. Post viral posts to get the most reach, do as many s4s as you can on your story, leave as many comments as you can on fellow creators posts so they return yours and boost your engagement.

There's a lot of other very good growth methods but I save them for my ebook readers ;)
