Thread: Unwritten RULES

Yanix - August 17, 2020, 12:33 am

I know these unwritten rules or laws are not followed by many individual person.
I am sure that only few unwritten laws or rules are followed by some people only.

Some unwritten rules I have in mind were:

1. If you open something, close it. (like when you open the door, you must close it)
2. If you make a mess...clean it up :D

Do you guys have some in mind? What was your unwritten rules?

Exalted - August 17, 2020, 12:37 am

I only follow these two rules to live by, both from Leroy Jethro Gibbs (NCIS)

Rule #3: Never believe what you are told.

Rule #7: Always be specific when you lie.

Rule #3: Never believe what you are told. --- lol yeah maybe it will be just a gossip

Rule #7: Always be specific when you lie. --- that would be pretty hard if you were not good to tell lies :D

Always double-check. Always.

Lying is a skill and one that can be improved upon rather quickly ?

hahaha when I lie, I can easily get caught because my eyes can't hide it easily, that was my mom told me when I was a child :D

Cooligan - August 17, 2020, 12:51 am

#1: Don't speak unless you're sure of what you want to say; this will often result in unwanted attention.

#2: Always move out of the way of the cars trying to pass you if you're in the left lane on the highway.

#3: If you see someone in need of help, fucking help them.

#4: I stick with my friends, and my friends stick with me.

#5: Only follow what you believe to be true.

Not in any order. Random ones that came to mind.

Wow some great rules to reflect brother.

I am began to think of some more great rules in life that we should be doing and not being taken for granted.

AsSaSs@iN - August 17, 2020, 12:59 am

If someone holds a door for you, say thank you.

If it's just you and one other person on the street walking past each other, say hi.

Love both of these, especially the second one.

We're all far too disconnected in an ever much so connected world, that's the irony behind it all. Though unfortunately in 2020 America, I just don't see this happening as most people will tend to cross the street if it's only them and someone else, especially if they're a timid person.

As I said, Costco isn't sponsoring a contest to eat an entire cake. Competitive eaters just do it and upload it on their YouTube accounts to get views. If you look around, you'll see competitive eating channels do all sorts of "challenges," like eat the entire menu of a fast food restaurant in one sitting, or eat some massive quantity of food, but often there isn't an official contest by the people selling the food, the YouTubers are just doing it for the views.

I like this thread, thank you OP. Some unwritten rules I abide by are,

- "Don't ask for something if the person only has one left(gum, cigarette, etc)."
- "If you use up all of the toilet paper, you go refill it."
- "Don't mess up an apology with an excuse."

This website provides a whole list of unwritten rules people usually have to abide by in order to have a relatively happy life.

You're unwritten rules seems to be real cool and need some great disciplines. I like it brother.

at what point would you rather spend the time?

39 years?

35?

30?

a question that I actually thought of myself even though I'm a very law abiding citizen who does not condone any illegal.

close your mouth when you EAT!

When people eat in public with their mouth open it makes me want to dish out some violence.

I don't care if you're my mother, best friend, or the love of my life - if you eat like a cow grazing in a field, I will want to murder you.

Nobody wants to hear that shit.

Shiny Diamond - August 19, 2020, 12:49 pm

Here's one from me too:

Rule #46: Don't make fun of someone else's misfortune.

MrJamesDean - August 19, 2020, 12:56 pm

One from my pops that's always stuck with me:

Treat everything of others as if it were priceless, and avoid those who treat your stuff as worthless.

So many people I knew who were careless with my stuff or didn't show any kind of appreciation ended up being bad friends and bad people, and the few who were really careful and considerate have been the greatest people in my life.

i always tell the people i love the most (family/relationships) "i love you" as the last thing i say to them (before sleep, before they go somewhere, etc) as it may be the last thing i ever tell them. even if we're arguing or something.

(morbid i guess)

My unwritten rule is when you're at someone's house, you should always ask if they recycle before you throw something recyclable in the trash.

I was raised to do this. Wondering if more people do this???

I might now implement this in our home and it seems really useful and a must way to preserve or environment from the waste we brought to our surroundings.

+1 for you then. If everyone in the world did this, it would lead to a much healthier world.

Also, if your municipality does not offer a recycling bin, you can take your recyclables to any supermarket(kroger, meijer, walmart, etc.). They always have multiple recycling bins behind the stores.

I hate it when people take from my plate, it is a known unspoken unwritten rule to NOT take from others people plate.

But sometimes unfortunately friends and family or just in general people that feel close to you feel like they can shove their utensils to your plate and thats a BIG NO NO from me! ;)
