

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: [\[POSITIVITY\] Adversity Makes Us Better](#)

M?tt - August 18, 2020, 5:11 am

It's been a long time since I've really paid attention to the community here and being I'm not sure the average age group, I'm sure that a lot of us are handling these last few months very differently. Some have taken action to attempt to make a difference, some may be sitting back and observing, and others may have little to no interest in the outside world and opt to stay out of it all. Whichever path you have decided to take (mentioned or not), this is a difficult time for everyone. How we are dealing with these troubling times will vary, but how we can handle it is entirely up to you. One might think that these are the worst times of our lives, but there is plenty worse that can happen to all of us. I'm not negating the severity of whatever you may be experiencing right now, but it will pass like anything else. How long it takes for everything to blow over will not be determined by your choices, but how you handle this adverse environment is fully within your control. Take some time today to really think to yourself about things you have to be thankful for and that the light is just up ahead. Push one more minute, one more hour, one more day, and keep expanding that gap once confidence has been placed within that previous time frame.

You can get past your difficult times and you can emerge better than you were before. Wishing you all a wonderful day and am available to assist (whenever I log on).

Artisan - August 18, 2020, 5:18 am

This was a nice read. Thank you for the positivity. We could use some more of this on the forum and in our daily lives.

M?tt - August 18, 2020, 5:25 am

(Aug 18, 2020 05:18 AM)Artisan Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This was a nice read. Thank you for the positivity. We could use some more of this on the forum and in our daily lives.

Glad I could be of assistance and that you found this useful. We all see it a lot where the majority of us don't speak out about the good but come out immediately to discuss the bad and the wrong.

I'm hoping this post shifts the mindset of some and helps carry on throughout these hard times.

RIP Juice WRLD - August 20, 2020, 5:48 am

Thanks for the positivity!

Was a nice read.