Thread: HF Poker Room

Goods - August 22, 2020, 9:32 pm

Im looking for someone to create a poker room using HF's API. Im not nearly knowledgeable enough about this to do it myself.

Already have bought the domain and will pay for hosting. Also will pay the developer an amount discussed at a later time.

Thanks.

Are you willing to just pay someone to do the job or would you contribute in the code too ?
I see a decent UI VueJS with any cool backend (laravel, nestjs, symfony, django ..)

There was a poker system i used to use which is still used i believe by bigboybets (Runescape gambling) i think it was called mavericks and was easy to find a coder to make an api to trade forum tokens for chips via cash in / cash out system however you would need to make a HF acc solely for transferring credits for withdraw and deposits.

Would be happy to assist where i can!

Last time we talked you offered $200, then spoke with your partner and modified it to $10, probably that's why. If you can pay a fair amount of $$$, we can talk again if you still need it.

People underestimate the time it takes to build stuff like this. And the people qualified to do it are probably already developers. Which means they won't accept low pay since it's essentially what they're doing all day already.

10$ really? That's a whole new level of low balling.. Might look into it for a few hundred though

I started working on this, waiting for the app to get approval before I can integrate the HF API. Already have a great name for it.

I just finished importing my custom ThreeJS Engine into my go-to Javascript framework, working smoothly.

this is a shitty move, but personally if I where you i'd just snipe this project and keep it as your own, no way someone offering 10$ for really anything can successfully run it. (unless the other users where misinformed and the OP is paying atleast 15x 10$)

I don't agree with the "this is a shitty move" the thread is 3 months old, OP offered 10$ it seems that no one picked it up, I made a very solid foundation in about an hour. OP can still contact me if he

I am definitely interested. I considered starting my own Poker app a couple years ago and got started on the table view with cards, players, etc. I'd rather do the backend work with someone else handling frontend. I know PHP, MySQL, Python, JavaScript, HTML/CSS, Node.js, some Java, React, and a few others. Fully versed in both Linux and Windows too, as well as being a long time Texas Holdem NL cash game player with some $1/2 play and $50-100 tournament buyins thrown in.

I actually want to start working on this project again, thinking to make a full 3D Game (using ThreeJS), we could team up if you want, I'd prefer that we make the backend in Node, if you understand TypeScript, then TypeScript it is :P, Send me a PM if you are interested

Its a shame that this has been talked about for a year and a half and no one's made it yet. I'm sure a lot of HF users would enjoy this.

I'm willing to fund this project if that's what's needed to make it happen.

I did some in the past, there was a big run on it back in October with an HF contest.

I am during some improvements to my HF poker game and relaunching it soon, if anyone is interested hit me up.

I agree it probably does but, to be fair, I had no idea what a project like this would cost so it was going to be a conversation to be had at some point to see how extensive something like this would be. I definitely agree with you though.

Just to be able to introduce the bytes currency as the gambling currency. Im not a developer but, I didn't see any way to use the 'bytes' system without using HF's API.

This was the plan all along. Bytes being the only poker gambling currency.

Hackers - December 16, 2022, 6:54 pm

If I were going to do this, I would start with 1 game and expand from there. I think it is best if a framework is created to allow casino related API apps to be created easily. Preferably there would be an existing codebase that handles user balances, withdrawals, deposits, and basic table instances. From there it would be up to the community to build out the proper logic for a house game, community game, for all diff forms... blackjack, holdem, limit, no limit, baccarat, 5 card, etc etc etc

As long as there is an on/off ramp for bytes, the HF API could be the core of a very powerful casino engine. That said, that's risky as it's essentially online gambling using a virtual currency that has monetary value. I want to help build something like this out, but preferably it would be done under an LLC with legal reporting and compliance to avoid any issues in the US... That would force HF users to report purchases and sales of bytes to the IRS... I think it would be important to only offer skills based games like Texas Holdem and not a game of only chance. I also work with a few casinos in the digital space so it's hard for me to really ethically be involved... but I know one day I'll launch my own virtual currency / crypto casino - at least that's the goal.

{ RadioActive Hack } - April 2, 2023, 4:17 am

This would be interesting. I could make some money on the HF fish. I hope this turns into something.

eXperienc3 - April 4, 2023, 5:59 pm have good experience in code, i can build this. About HF apis ,if any, will need to look into that. But i can build this app.

Even if somebody else does, i will be interested in doing this, can look into the code to see if it's fair ! no jokes with poker!!

even interested in being just a player

On another note, I have seen so many applications, at least around my country.

Would be great to build something in open source so that every player knows what he/she is getting into.
