amp. - September 10, 2020, 11:44 pm

title says it. I been trading crypto for 3 years. of course I never was profitable cause I was using retail methods. this month is my 1 year birthday with price action trading. I learned from free content I grinded in my bedroom, paid for telegrams, and did 1/1s with traders I like. I have been trading the 1 min charts for say 3 months now. I paid $75 for a 1/1 with my favorite trader. he's able to easily 100x accounts.

not to sound like a mlm or anything. im truly confident I can finally leave ew in the past to focus on my career as a full time trader. I just think this post will be fun to look back at a year from now. hf truly changed my life with the people and info I got.

Its good to see someone self learning and using it to make a full time income out of it. Goodluck with your journey bud.

Congrats on all of your accomplishments thus far my man, some great work.

I would also recommend you speak with Golden Complex , he's incredibly knowledgeable when it comes to these topics and it just might benefit you in a major way. Definitely worth at least having a conversation with him though!

I wish you the best of luck on your future endeavors. <3

Blockonome - September 11, 2020, 3:37 am

Let me know how it goes OP, however, if you want to be a successful trader, you need to do it all on your own. Good to have a mentor, but you need to let him go, once you are confident enough in yourself.

Trading on 1 min charts is extremely risky, it's pure technical. Learn fundamental analysis and you'll make a lot more.

If you want some free content from a former Goldman Sachs trader, rather than a so-called "Guru" who makes all his money teaching trading, then check out:

Never stop learning my friend. Best of luck to you with trading.

a lot of people think the 1m charts is "noise" or "risky" when the truth is when you understand trading is a probability game is when you excel by managing risk. if you have a $10,000 account, risk 1%, and lose... you have 99 other chances to be right. the odds of hitting a 8 string loss is very thin. especially when it's not a coin flip.

here is a chart from last night as I stayed up during london session 2-3 am cst for forex. I fumbled the trade here, but I can link another chart where someone caught the move. you see it says 1r, 2r, 3r. this R is the return. this is why I like the 1 min charts.

the "guru" I paid has his own video on pipcast youtube his name is shabs. an example of one of his trades is here.

who wouldn't want to make 130x their money? the 1min chart is pure gold for risk reward ratio.

yeah not really a dedicated mentor to handle hold, im simply paying $75 for 1 hour of his time. I just want additional insight having someone see how I mark charts.

How much did you start you account with?

I feel like 1min charts you gotta trade with your hand on the pulse of the market, technical analysis seems like a self fulfilling prophecy - if enough people believe it might just work.

All I'm saying is your broker is sending out trades to do the exact opposite of what you're doing because they know their retail traders will lose most of the time. So just be careful. Glad to see you're taking risk management into account.

Should check in stock trading as well man I didn't need a course or anything send me a message I can help you!

I dont trade retail anymore. I see what the broker sees I trade with the banks. I would suggest looking into "forexmas" by ICT on youtube. thanks for commenting man. still intersted in the ig ebook.

to teach myself proper risk management I did a $10 account, risked 10% per trade. this is a lot, but if I can manage $10 I can manage $100k with 0.05% risk. not 5%, but half a %.

I'm happy to hear this! The learning curve is very rough and it's a blessing when you finally find the way out of losing strategies and gain some confidence. Trading is right up there with starting a business in one of the hardest things to learn without losing a lot of money.

If you ever want to chat, let me know. I'm heavily involved in the industry.

the call went great. I screen recorded it shared w my group and everyone was raving like its some mlm conference. the energy was unmatched to anything. it felt like a shroom trip awakening moment. wanted to cry after everything. I applied for a FTMO trading account. its where I can get funded to trade $10-100k, keep 70% of the profits, and any losses are written off. exciting times ahead. thanks for everyone's interest in my thread.

I agree with Ivex You have been learning to trade from retail 'gurus' for 3 years. Anton may be seen as guru himself but his content is some of the best free resources available on the internet

Bacardi Cola Lime - September 13, 2020, 2:53 am

Well, as long as you found someone that you can understand and profit for real, then keep it up. Just remind yourself the risks and only trade what you can afford to lose.

amp. - September 13, 2020, 9:51 am
