Just use that Rosetta stone app... seemed to work teaching americans other languages, dont see how it couldn't be good for English learning.

Instead of taking classes, use to money to make some friends to spend time with you and speak in good English. Practice makes perfect.

There are certain practices you can follow.

Watch English movies with subtitles.

Watch Youtube videos.

Speak with your friends online/offline. Even if you cant speak fluently, just try. Practice will make you better. In the course of time, you'll speak English fluently and good.

Start talking more. You get a lot more experience by actively participating in it.

Join calls and chats, start typing and learn to embrace your mistakes. The more you make, the more you learn and eventually you'll become eloquent in yet another language!

What helped me was literally just staying on HF and posting and conversating with people in English.

Lol, I am official translator if you are interested, not a official teacher, but I have been teaching English before! just a problem, because your mother tongue, is probably a language I do not speak :D

blkchain - September 21, 2020, 3:18 am just using the language honestly. find native english speakers and get on the phone with them and start having english conversations.

Maybe english tutorial would do and watch movies and tv series in English too. In typing, I used Grammarly to correct some mistakes.

Practice to talk whether you are speaking good or bad with friends, when you find out that you are committing errors you can correct yourself which can help you build vocabulary and confidence to excel at newly learned language.

Watch more English videos and get an app such as Hello Talk to help you in your journey.

That's the thing, if you only need to improve your speaking English, that means you already know how to read/write/listen in English, which is definitely something positive, it's just that your speaking is passive, meaning you don't practice it, or never did. If this is the case, you are in luck, all you need to do is communicate with other people(as many as you can as much as you can), had the same case with one of the languages I know(russian), in around 6 months maybe less, I could freely speak it, with minor errors. So instead of wasting money on some courses, just play games, join voice chats, and communicate as much as possible. As a second option, you can always watch tv shows/movies(this definitely improved my English over the years).

Good luck

This is pretty much what i did:

- Watch english movies with subtitles on
- Turn on subtitles in videogames
- Have someone to speak the language with everyday
- Listen to audiobooks
- Read books
- Just make it your everyday life and you will learn alot from it

OBAMASELF - September 23, 2020, 8:02 am

Could you please tell me, what is your native language?

banxia - September 23, 2020, 11:02 pm

That is a good thing to desire, my humble advice is to read more of books written in English and watch some little more British movies.
