Thread: Did I get scammed XMR>? \$50 xmr to help

LGx Hackz zZ - September 24, 2020, 10:59 am

Okay so I bought $300 worth of btc I sent it to my binance account an traded it for XMR I then made a withdraw of that xmr from binance to xmrwallet .net I have never gotten the payment to my xmr account although it has 600 conformations and been 48 hours..

You've successfully withdrawn 3.09586063 XMR to the address .

I would check with binance support since the confirmations went through eseaclient - September 24, 2020, 2:25 pm

If you google the URL you'll see a lot of scam reports about xmrwallet.com, which is the exact same site as xmrwallet.net.

Looks like you got scammed OP.

Sad to hear that this happened to you. I would really suggest doing research on where you're sending money to even if it looks legit.

Not necessarily,

As the crypto left Binance wallet and the transaction is on the ledger then all you have to do is contacting xmrwallet.net support team and tell them to credit the coins manually they will ask the txid. But I advise you to use desktop wallets such as exodus to store your coins, exchanges and these web wallets are risky. If it get resolved below is my XMR wallet for a gift :)

IS THAT SITE LEGIT OR NO

Did u use both xmr address and payment id? If you're sending them on a website that stores your keys with them, it's Mandatory to provide the payment id or it'll be considered lost forever.

Pimping - September 25, 2020, 5:20 pm

For xmr you need to give payment id along with the address or it will not work

LGx Hackz zZ - September 25, 2020, 7:52 pm

this was a binance withdraw so I did not send it I just provided the xmr wallet address its never came thru from binance

Your wallet may need to sync.

Google/Youtube have been promoting scams for years. Yet they ban legit Crypto youtubers for no reason. It's quite out of hand.
