

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Nvidia, mixed feeling and seeking opinions

Christdak1ng - September 26, 2020, 9:28 am

Nvidia is a very potential multinational as it produce computer chips for an extremely fast grown industry, video games, and is also aligning it self to dominate the AI Chips market, an other fast grown industry due to the recent advance in Machine learning.

But Financial Analyst currently state that Nvidia is overvalued (as of other big tech companies in the us).

I currently own some shares and don't know if I should keep my initial long term investment strategy (5+ years) or switch to a trader strategy and sell before a crash, which I believe will be happening sometime before Christmas, and buy again at low.

Please feel free to state your opinion.

Stevensan - September 26, 2020, 10:42 am

Sell Nvidia before Christmas. Buy it back after Christmas. You can change your long term investment into a short term investment if the stocks are overvalued.

Rockajaw - October 3, 2020, 8:16 pm

(Sep 26, 2020 10:42 AM)Stevensan Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Sell Nvidia before Christmas. Buy it back after Christmas. You can change your long term investment into a short term investment if the stocks are overvalued.

Why are you saying before christmas?

Stevensan - October 4, 2020, 1:18 am

(Oct 3, 2020 08:16 PM)Rockajaw Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why are you saying before christmas?
Because a lot of people are selling their stocks on Christmas.

Christdak1ng - October 4, 2020, 8:49 am

(Oct 4, 2020 01:18 AM)Stevensan Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Because a lot of people are selling their stocks on Christmas.

This, but its also my "time frame" if i wouldn't be keeping my current long term strategy and switch to "trading mode". I look to much ahead when trading